M'BRIDE FREED IN VOTE FRAUD TRIAL

Today

Two Kinds of Power.
Hiram Johnson Suggests.
Precious Gold, Keep It.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

HODGE, Cal., Feb. 11.

TODAY, THE THIRD anniversary of the Lateran Treaty, which recognizes the Pope's temporal power, Mussolini visited the Vatican and saw the Pope for the second time in his life. On the first occasion, 10 years ago, Mussolini saw Pope Pius at a distance, when the pontiff appeared in public on a high balcony.

FUTURE HISTORIANS will regret that no competent reporter could see that meeting today. The Pope, in white, his keen eyes blazing in his scholarly face, pale for lack of the mountain climbing exercise to which he had always been accustomed, saw the ruler of Italy, in formal black, his powerful chin and high forehead telling the story of his rise to power.

WHAT DID THEY say to each other? Very little, probably, each word written out in advance and approved by both. The duration of the interview, long enough to seem cordial, not long enough to suggest disagreement, was arranged to the minute.

DID MUSSOLINI kiss the Pope's hand, a custom with which the greatest king would comply if a Catholic? Doubtless, for Mussolini is Catholic by profession, as dictator of Italy, although he thought little of religion or established government while he fought his way up through ultra-radicalism to his place at the top.

WHAT A PICTURE for a great artist to paint. Mussolini, representing power as brief as the life of the individual; the Pope, representing power based on the religious faith of millions, and marvelous, world-wide organization.

Popes will be in the Vatican, negotiating, planning, looking far ahead, building up strongholds of faith east and west when Mussolini shall have become a memory in history. The one, in white, represents persistent force; the other, in black, is a meteor, its brilliant path of light soon to be forgotten, but, which alone is important, ITS EFFECT ON MEN AND HISTORY, PERMANENT.

FRANCE DECLINED to pay what she owed this country and Andrew Jackson said a debtor refusing to pay should have his property seized. France ultimately paid; we cannot seize international properties for debt, and Senator Hiram Johnson suggests an excellent substitute.

He offers a bill strictly forbidding the sale here of any securities, by any nation that has defaulted on its obligations to the United States. Foreigners would not like to be cut off from this financial sugarbowl.

Will Rogers, back from a tour around the world, says:

"In Europe, when you're introduced to somebody, they say, 'Glad to meet you, cancel the debts.'"

Hiram Johnson's suggestions might cure that.

THIS, AS THE date line tells you, is written on the Mohave Desert, 60 miles east of the Pacific Ocean, and 2,000 feet above that wide surface. It does not seem like a desert now, in this winter of strange weather.

The Mohave River, which flows ordinarily out of sight below the desert floor, supplying ranch wells with water, a long row of cottonwood trees marking its course, is now a wide torrent, undermining bridges, washing away big trees that it has nourished.

THE HIGH MOUNTAINS on the west are covered with snow more than 20 feet deep, and the wind sweeping over them from the ocean is full of oxygen, and life.

This is a good place to stop, on your way to the Coast. Barstow or Victorville will provide accommodations. But do not come to stay unless you have money to leave with, when you go, and maintain you, while here. It is a place to live, not to earn, or make profits.

This is mentioned, again, because chambers of commerce north, west and southwest fear that traffic and money may be diverted here from more promising sections of the Coast.

ECUADOR ABANDONS the gold basis, with a good excuse; it has no gold. The international bank established by the League of Nations will help weak nations to maintain the gold standard, so it says. More interesting to us are the shipments of small, strongly built barrels, filled with United States gold coins, pouring steadily into the Bank of France vaults.

THE WAY TO keep your gold standard is to keep your gold. This country should realize that in time, and forbid gold exportation, on any pretext.

If our supplies of quinine or digitalis were threatened, we should forbid their exportation. High finance tells you that gold is as important for prosperity as quinine for malaria, or digitalis for weak hearts.

You may ask why, with the world's greatest gold supply, something seems to have gone wrong with our prosperity. High finance says the question is not pertinent.

THE PRICE OF RAW sugar dropped below 3 cents a pound Tuesday, lowest prices in history were recorded. There is opportunity to use profitably the great crops of fruit that this rainy season makes certain. The farmer also is interested, for his family and his stock.

Mr. Babst, head of the big sugar company, should advertise special low prices for molasses by the barrel. Mixed with chopped or shredded cornstalks, molasses is a food of greatest value for horses and cattle.

American Marines Bombed, Truce Halts Fighting for Evacuation of Neutrals

BULLETIN.

SHANGHAI, China, Friday, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Five hundred-pound aerial bombs will smash into Woosung when hostilities on that front are resumed before many days have passed.

It will be the first time such huge missiles of destruction have been used in this area, but the big bombs will not be dropped on Chapei, because that is too close to the International Settlement, and the explosion of such a bomb is terrific.

By DIXON HOSTE
International News Service.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 11.—To enable evacuation of noncombatants from the Shanghai danger zone, Japanese and Chinese forces today agreed to a brief truce, effective from 8 a. m. until noon tomorrow.

The truce was arranged by Catholic priests, who approached Rear Admiral Shimada, Japanese chief of staff, and Chinese military leaders.

The desire to evacuate noncombatants was prompted largely by the bombing of a Chinese mill in the International Settlement by a Japanese bombing plane, in which 100 United States Marines billeted there narrowly escaped death or injury. Six Chinese were killed and 16 injured.

A formal apology for the bombing of the mill was delivered to United States Consul General Edwin R. Cunningham by the Japanese consul general today.

The mill was badly damaged. The incident would have been worse but for the fact that an incendiary bomb dropped by the low-flying Japanese failed to ignite.

Cunningham stated that no protest had been made regarding the bombing, the Japanese consul immediately expressing his regret

Councilmen Favor City Tow Garage

Plans for a municipal garage to which may be towed illegally parked autos appeared a step nearer today following a meeting of Council and police heads. Director James M. Clark announced Councilmen John S. Herron and W. Y. English were in favor of the plan and would vote for a garage and two towing trucks soon. Clark, disturbed at the increase in illegal parking since a state law was passed prohibiting towing, plans also to ask Council to allow such towing.

MERCURY HITS 75; SNOW DUE

A record heat mark for February 11 was made today. By 2 p. m. the mercury climbed to 75, five degrees above the mrk of February 11, 1898. The all time heat record for February is 77, established February 8, 1900.

Rain and colder weather is predicted for tonight and on Friday snow flurries are expected.

STOCKS RALLY SHARPLY ON CREDIT PLAN

Gains of 3 to 6 Points Numerous; U. S. Steel Leads Vigorous Advance

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—Stocks were suddenly jerked off of the bottom of a 29-month decline today, as the unexpected plan of modification of the national banking system waswidely greeted with enthusiasm in Wall street.

Prices surged upward in the most violent recovery since mid-December, and bullishness spread to the commodity markets, where several staples made modest advances.

Added to the Washington news of the bi-partisan move to increase the volume of credit and currency, were announcements that the Ford Motor Company would soon start production of its new models, resuming its usual large-scale consumption of materials, and the ordering of the regular quarterly dividend of $2.50 by Union Pacific Railroad.

VOLUME INCREASES

In the stock exchange, 1,500,000 shares were traded in the first two hours alone, or more than the turn-over for any five-hour session since February 1. Net gains of $3 to $6 a share were numerous in leading issues, while volatile Auburn shot up more than $13.

The Washington plan took speculative quarters by surprise, particularly the bears. While constructive news from Washington had been rumored since early in the week, nothing as far-reaching as the banking revision projected had been expected.

United States Steel rose $5, getting above $43; American Telephone $7 to $118; Dupont more than $6 to $53; Union Pacific, more than $7.50 to $77; Santa Fe, more than $5 to nearly 78; American Can, $6 to close to $63, and Auburn, more than $13 to above $107.

FRESH IMPETUS

Trading slackened somewhat after midday. After a vigorous upswing in the first half hour, the market eased off a little, until toward midday news of the Union Pacific dividend provided fresh impetus to the upswing.

Miscellaneous issues up 2 to 3 a share included General Motors, Bethlehem Steel, International Harvester, Sears, Doebuck, National Biscuit, Westinghouse Electric, General Electric, Woolworth, Union Carbide, Consolidated Gas, New York Central, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, New Haven, Public Service of New Jersey and others.

POPE RECEIVES MUSSOLINI IN SPLENDOR

Anniversary of Peace Pacts Brings First Meeting of Duce, Pontiff at Vatican

By GUGLIELMO EMANUEL
International News Service.

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 11.—Amid a display of regal honors, Pope Pius XI today received Premier Benito Mussolini, of Italy, in audience at the Vatican City.

The historic meeting, accompanied by great display and pomp, marked the first time Il Duce and the Pontiff had met, and the first time since 1870 that the head of the Vatican had received an Italian Premier.

Arranged to observe the anniversary of the signing of the Lateran treaties, the visit of Mussolini to the Vatican more especially marked the end of the long-drawn out strife between state and church which was fanned when Mussolini ordered the Catholic Action societies dissolved.

Mussolini bowed deeply and kissed the hand of the Pontiff. He, in turn, presented the Premier with several gold medals for himself and his family. Mussolini wore the insignia of the Order of the Golden Spur, to which he was recently admitted by Pope Pius.

Leaving the room, Mussolini beamed wide smiles of apparent satisfaction with the meeting and then went to St. Peter's.

No one ever will know what the Pope and Mussolini said to each other, or whether the meeting was purely a formal one or was made the occasion for a candid exchange of views.

Mussolini himself wore the high uniform of a state minister, making an imposing figure as he went toward the audience with the Pope through rooms thronged by Swiss guards, Papal gendarmes, pickets of the Palestine guards and the noble guards. All extended their characteristic salutes.

TAX ON SALES SEEMS CERTAIN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—A general manufacturers sales tax of 1 or 2 per cent appeared certain to be the big item on the new revenue bill being drafted by the House Ways and Means Committee with appointment today of a subcommittee of seven to study the proposal advocated by a large number of representatives of big industries.

Subcommittees also were appointed to draft recommendations for increase in income taxes and for the levying of a gift tax.

Acting Chairman Crisp declined to make the personnel of the subcommittees public. The proposal likely of approval is to levy a general sales tax on manufacturers as they come from the factory in preference to taxes on individual manufactured products.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, recovering in a hospital from an operation on his eye, had a most distinguished visitor today. It was King George himself, who had driven over from Buckingham Palace. He was accompanied by an equerry.

Congress Should Remake Tax System to Revive Trade

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

At a time when business is already discouraged to an inordinate degree, Acting Secretary Mills revises upward the Treasury recommendations for tax increase.

The mere threat of punitive taxation serves to deepen the depression and to throw additional men out of employment.

The administration tax plan is not only vulnerable from a strategic standpoint, but is likely to prove ineffective from a revenue standpoint. It is impossible to increase tax proceeds proportionately by raising the rate. The Mellon-Mills-Hoover delusion is that the country can raise necessary revenues by hypothetical increases of rates on hypothetical income.

AS A MATTER OF FACT, the national income has shrunken enormously as a result of subnormal business conditions.

The sound objective of economic statesmanship at this time should be to AUGMENT THE SOCIAL INCOME.

The Hoover reconstruction drive is halfhearted. The President seeks feebly to fight deflation through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other agencies, and yet would feed deflation by adding greatly to the tax burden.

As long as expediency rules at Washington and one move offsets the effect of another, hope of planned economic relief will continue to be frustrated.

THIS WEEK MR. MILLS tells Congress that taxes must be boosted $1,241,000,000 to carry out the Treasury's budget-balancing plan. A month ago the Treasury estimated that $920,000,000 additional would be needed.

THAT IS A SAMPLE OF THE INEVITABLE CONSEQUENCE OF ECONOMICALLY UNSOUND FISCAL POLICIES.

Until something fundamental is done to arrest the deflation, the government will never be able to catch up with growing deficits.

The way out for public finance is to USE THE FULL CREDIT OF THE GOVERNMENT TO CHECK THE DEPRESSION and to inaugurate impulses for recovery.

Forty-six scientific economists have recommended a prosperity loan of $5,000,000,000 to finance useful public works and to re-employ idle labor.

Such a wholehearted offensive against the depression will initiate a spiral of forces MAKING FOR PROGRESSIVE RECOVERY.

The fountains and springs from which taxes are drawn would again be refilled.

IN ORDER TO STRENGTHEN the campaign for economic recuperation, Congress should avoid defeating the larger objective by a narrow-minded tax policy.

One obvious remedy, which was suggested by the late Paul M. Warburg, would be to stop sinking fund payments for federal debt retirement until normal conditions are restored.

Prior to the depression, the government properly retired debt twice as fast as originally contemplated. But under present conditions the policy of creating new debt to retire old debt is an economic absurdity.

Secondly, as E. R. A. Seligman, Columbia University economist and tax authority, has pointed out, economic stability can be promoted under existing conditions by borrowing more heavily and taxing more leniently.

FAILURE TO DO SO WILL ADD TO THE VICIOUS CYCLE OF DEPRESSION.

SCIENTIFIC ECONOMISTS BELIEVE that in time of depression governments should spend freely, tax lightly and go into debt, whereas in Judge Henderson this afternoon temporarily refused a petition for a demurrer against the evidence affecting George J. Schad in the First Ward vote conspiracy trial. He said, however, he reserved the right to change his decision at any later time, when the matter had been given further consideration or a new motion presented.

The prosecution closed its case against the five officials accused of conspiracy in the First Ward vote case this afternoon. The day was filled with a fanfare of sensational developments, which included:

1—A directed verdict of acquittal, asked by Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk, being granted for C. J. McBride, former secretary of the Board for Assessment and Revision of Taxes.

2—Filing of a demurrer to the evidence against George J. Schad, former chairman of the board. This move made by Defense Attorney Hiram D. Hirsh opens the way for a directed verdict, but does not prohibit defense testimony as a petition for a directed verdict would.

3—Admission by Frank Alpert, former subordinate tax assessor, indicted and now a state's witness, that he had lied during the court trial and before the grand jury to protect Paul Walsh and Saul Klein, two of the defendants.

Clunk, in asking for the directed verdict for McBride, said no evidence had been found to connect him with the charges.

Judge Davis W. Henderson granted the motion at once.

Attorney Hirsh then made his

FORD TO MAKE '8,' NEW '4'

DETROIT, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—Henry Ford today confirmed rumors that he is planning to bring out an improved four and a new eight-cylinder car in the near future.

He also said the chasses of the new models will be so constructed as to permit installation of either four or eight-cylinder engines.

Mr. Ford, in an open interview, confirmed rumors that the new car will be of longer wheel base, lower hung chasses and heavier.

He added that production will start some time this month, the first public showing to be early in March.

Many leading automobile executives have held that there could be no definite upturn in the automobile industry until Ford's plans were disclosed.

Mr. Ford expressed the hope that materials manufacturers would not "begin to raise prices" coincident with increasing activity upon the part of manufacturers. He said:

Nicola Ill, Court Delays Tax Trial

Federal trial of F. F. Nicola, real estate man, February 17 on an indictment charging attempt to evade payment of $26,394 in income taxes in 1928 and $5,874 in 1929, was continued to the May term today by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker.

Attorney J. A. Richardson, of Nicola's counsel, presented a petition declaring early trial would endanger his client's health. An affidavit by Dr. C. C. Moyar said a general breakdown for Nicola might be caused by trial now.

Gibbons Lauds Chinese Heroism

Editor's Note—Floyd Gibbons, International News Service correspondent, has been with the Japanese forces as they attacked the Woosung area from the Whangpoo River. The following dispatch was received today after a delay in transmission due to the difficulty of communication between the battle front and Shanghai, whence it was radioed across the Pacific.

WITH THE JAPANESE ARMY NORTH OF WOOSUNG, Feb. 11.—Hello, everybody!

I don't know whether you shout "Banzai!" "Hoot, Mon!" or "Vive!" when you want to cheer the Chinese soldiers for putting up a swell fight, but whatever the expression I am here to broadcast my compliments and admiration for the subborn and courageous resistance those babies are making against the terrific odds in numbers and materials in their defense of the Woosung area.

Yesterday I paid my respects to the Japanese fliers for the nifty job they have been doing on their low-flying bombing expeditions in dirty thick weather. Now here is a bouquet for the Chinese defenders, who have been on the receiving end of those same bombs for 48 hours and are still sticking to what ruins remain of their posts in the face of heavy and repeated attacks from land and sea.

Believe me, boys and girls, this Oriental jamboree at the corner of Woosung Creek and the Whangpoo River is a battle.

I have been down here for the last 40 hours, and it's getting hotter hourly. With a motor speedboat of Detroit-make and two Chinese boys I pushed off from alongside the United States destroyer Barker and dropped downstream.

The up and down parade of Japanese destroyers was still in progress with its terrible pounding and blasting away at the homes and entrenchments of Woosung village. A rain was falling and a light mist merged with the darker smoke from the burning buildings.

Heavy bombing seaplane with enormous projectiles that looked like aerial torpedoes suspended between their pontoons droned and wheeled continually at an altitude of approximately 300 or 400 feet.

VILLAGE BLASTED

Repeatedly they drove down at sharp angles on the ruins of Woosung village, released explosives and sped away in the [illegible] of machine-gun bullets from the Chinese defenses.

Not only were the defenders sticking it out, but they were actually resisting because every low approach of the airplanes was met with a riveting fusilade of machine-gun fire.

Those aerial torpedoes—they looked like they weighed anywhere from 500 to 1,000 pounds—produced terrific detonations and sudden volcanic eruptions of building material, mud and debris, but with my field glasses trained on the scene from a distance of 200 yards I was unable to see a single human being amid the ruins.

Up the river from the direction of the Yangtze steamed a large destroyer of the flotilla leader type. She loomed dark gray against the yellow waters of the Whangpoo, and her bridge and conning tower were bandaged and muffled with white splinter-proof mats looking for all the world like hundreds of mattresses and pillows being given an airing by a thrifty housewife.

SHIP IN ACTION

I watched the long gray muzzles of her four six-inch guns swing slowly into broadside positions as they brought to bear on the shore line. The gun crews of blue-uniformed sailors huddled close to the pieces behind armorplate shields.

Then the guns spoke—salvos of hot metal fired point-blank at 50 yards range right smack bang into the stone wall at the water's edge. I could see the heavy projectiles hit and explode fragments of rock and splinters of steel flying in all directions. The range was so close that I wouldn't be surprised if the steel splinters had flown back, striking the very ship that fired the shell.

Eight, 12, 16—they were slammed in hot as the destroyer steamed slowly upstream, but the surprise of all surprises came to me when I realized that between each thundering salvo the machine guns of the village waterfront defenses pecked back at the ship like hordes of hungry woodpeckers, while bullets rattled against the steel plates and armor screens with a sound like that of a load of gravel being dumped on a tin roof.

PRAISE FOR CHINESE

That's why I opened this broadcast with a word of admiration for those Chinese machine-gunners. It's the first time in my experiences in war that I have seen men receive a heavy cannon fire at close range and stick to their posts and answer it with machine guns.

There is one curious sidelight on this Woosung conflict, and the Japanese realize it.

You see, the Japanese army before the World War, was trained and instructed by German military officers and advisers, and the Japanese have consistently employed German methods in their offensive action.

But during the 13 years since the World War the Chinese army has been continually advised and instructed by the highest type of unemployed German general staff officers, and all that the German military learned on the defense has been placed at the disposal of the Chinese forces and officers.

Of course this fighting is one-sided, with all the advantages in armament on the Japanese side, but there is nobody engaged in this conflict who has given an exhibition of higher courage than these Chinese defenders of Woosung village.

And the Japanese are much surprised to encounter this unexpected resistance after the easy work in Manchuria. Now they give full credit to their former easy enemy.

'HINDENBURG LINE'

It now appears that the defensive positions of Woosung village are strongly-constructed subterranean affairs—a sort of transported Hindenburg line made in Germany, but laid down here in China with the result that neutral military observers here have the opportunity of witnessing how the Chinese defenses stack up against the Japanese-German offenses.

For the past few days the impact has been something like the meeting of an irresistible force and an immovable object, with resultant high losses to both the force and the object.

Taking advantage of a lull, I started down stream from the shelter of a lightship in the hope I could reach the mouth of the Yangtze and observe the destroyed forts.

RUN GAUNTLET

With one Chinese boy piloting and the other nursing the motor of our boat, we shot forward in an attempt to get by the danger spot before the next round of the battle was resumed.

No luck. I had gauged the time wrong. We had passed the entire length of the Chinese defenses, standing off 200 yards in the direction of the opposite shore and not a shot was fired in our direction when, into full view steaming up stream, there came another Japanese destroyer firing at the shore with her forward guns as she came.

I signaled to the Chinese boys to turn about and spee[illegible] upstream. We did, and just in time to get out of the withering line of fire of machine-gun bullets with which the Chinese shore defenses greeted the Japanese destroyer, whose course lay between us and that shore.

Once more we heard that leaden rattle of bullets against the steel sides of the destroyer as we realized what a small chance the frail wooden shell of our craft would have had against such a blast.

Joe, the Chinese boy piloting, turned a full-face grateful grin in my direction as we reached the zone of safety in the shelter of the stationary lightship. I asked:

"Joe, what for warship all time go boom boom against the Woosung people?"

With a shrug of his shoulders and Oriental resignation Joe replied:

MOVE AMERICAN CITIZENS-BORAH

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11. — A movement demanding the United States government evacuate its citizens from Shanghai at the earliest possible moment appeared to be gaining momentum in Congress today.

Representations to this end already have been made to Secretary of State Stimson by Senator Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, and other members of Congress, it was learned. Borah was reported to have pointed out the dangerous position of Americans in Shanghai.

Borah and other members of Congress have called attention to the danger of the United States being embroiled in a war in the Far East if American citizens should be killed in the spread of the Sino-Japanese fighting to the International Settlement.

Women in Shanghai Drop Parties for Knitting

By EDNA LEE
International News Service

SHANGHAI, Feb. 11.—Dinner jackets and Parisian evening gowns have given way to khaki suits and service uniforms and contract bridge parties have been supplanted by knitting teas in war-stricken Shanghai today.

Men and women here are rising gallantly to meet the emergency thrust upon them.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Hooker, the wife of Col. R. S. Hooker, commanding the United States Marines in this area, women are knitting sweaters as earnestly as they did during the World War days, Mrs. Hooker declared.

"We must have sweaters for the 1,200 men of the 31st Infantry, who have arrived here in a snowstorm from the tropical Philippines.

"Wives get panicky and frightened about war unless they are occupied. If they are busy they forget the sounds of the big guns and time passes more quickly while their husbands are away."

Groups of high school girls and debutantes, not to be outdone by the lads in the Shanghai Volunteer Corps, American troop, are assisting Mrs. Hooker.

Besides knitting, the women are making bandages, collecting clothing, assisting in refugee work, driving cars, opening homes for the homeless and supervising food kitchens.

JAPS APOLOGIZE TO U. S. FOR BOMBING

U. S. Marines Imperiled; Truce Arranged to Move Neutrals From Chapei

and characterizing the incident as a mistake. Cunningham said:

"I hope that this will illustrate the danger of planes flying over the Settlement. It serves as a practical illustration of the necessity of keeping military planes out of the area."

ADMIRAL CALLS

Admiral Nomura, commander-in-chief of all Japanese forces here, followed the consul's lead by calling upon Admiral Montgomery M. Taylor, commanding American troops. He expressed his deep regret over the incident and offered compensation to the relatives of the victims, who were four men and two women. Sixteen others were injured.

The pilot of the plane which bombed the Wingon mill succeeded in dropping two missiles on the Chinese positions. He then swooped upward to maneuver for a new position when the bomb release control of his craft failed and the deadly missiles dropped to earth just as he was over the mill. He was unaware of the fact he had bombed the mill until he returned to the airdrome, Japanese said.

That the American Marines escaped death or injury was little short of a miracle. Bugler Mayfield, of Columbia, S. C., said:

"I was sitting in the guard room reading about this 'war' in the newspapers when the room shook so hard I thought it was coming down about my head.

"I grabbed my automatic and rushed into the courtyard. I hadn't gone far when the first of the wounded were dragged out. Gosh, it was dreadful!"

MARINES ASSEMBLED

At the time the bombs landed a company of United States Marines, in charge of Lieut. John Cook, of Kentucky, and stationed in defense of the post, was assembled at the gate of the mill being photographed.

Had the bomb landed 100 yards north it undoubtedly would have wiped out 100 or more American Marines.

Other Marines were within a few feet of the building, which was wrecked. They said they clearly saw the Japanese airplane release the bombs, some of the Marines even asserting the Japanese "made no mistake," intending the bombs for this mill.

Others believe the bombs were intended for Chinese a few hundred yards across the creek, where at all times of day large crowds of women and children refugees are heading toward Markham Road Bridge to enter the Settlement through the Marine lines.

JAPS DRAW GUNS

Upon entering the office of the Marine lieutenant, all three Japanese officers had Lugers in hand and their fingers on the triggers, the gun muzzles actually within a few feet of the American's chest.

Lieut. Cook's first curt words were:

"Put those guns away."

Three armed Marine sentries who escorted the Japanese through the mill were instructed to see that they kept their pistols in their holsters.

Meanwhile guns, ammunition, and men were being lined up all along the front by the Japanese forces. Authorities in Shanghai said they did not know exactly how many men were being massed for the concerted drive, or where they were to be landed.

The Chinese also were preparing for the attack, planning a continuance of the stubborn defense which has won the praise of all neutral observers and which has been a source of continual surprise to the Japanese.

RECOVERS BABY 'SOLD' FOR $1

For $1 Mrs. Margaret M. Perence, 24, of Beaver Falls, signed an agreement giving custody of her 4-month-old son to her husband, Michael V. Ference, of 79 South Eleventh street, she testified today in Common Pleas Court.

But, on a habeas corpus writ, she won the baby back today, on order of Judge Ambrose B. Reid.

Mrs. Ference said she lay ill of pneumonia in Ohio Valley Hospital when her husband gave her the dollar with this suggestion:

U.S. DOUGHBOYS IN FRONT LINE

SHANGHAI, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—United States soldiers moved into the front line of International Settlement defenses today to relieve the Shanghai volunteer corps, as both Chinese and Japanese rushed their preparations for a new onslaught along the Chapei-Woosung battleground.

The 31st Infantry, which arrived from Manila a few days ago, was thrust into one of the most difficult sectors on the Settlement boundary, relieving three companies of volunteers, one of which was composed of American businessmen.

The American soldiers will guard the settlement from the gas works on Soochow creek northward along the boundary to within a city block of North railroad station in Chapei, one of the focal points in the nearly two-weeks-long battle in the native quarter.

SENATE NEARS VOTE ON JOB AID FUND

Leaders of Patriotic Groups Attack Plan in House, Scoring Appeal of Pinchot

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—The Senate today added $375,000,000 to the La Follette-Costigan unemployment relief bill for road construction.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—The Senate approached a vote on the question of giving federal money to feed the jobless today as a House committee heard the proposal assailed as unconstitutional.

Shortly before the Senate resumed debate on the La Follette-Costigan bill to appropriate $375,000,000 for direct federal relief, representatives of two patriotic organizations went before a House Labor Subcommittee to oppose the bill.

ASSAIL PINCHOT

Mary G. Kilbreth, chairman of the board of directors of the Woman Patriot Corporation, and Frank L. Peckham, vice president of the Sentinels of the Republic, testified Congress should not appropriate relief funds until money is requested by State Legislatures.

Peckham questioned statements regarding the need of federal relief by Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania. He said:

"If the rest of his statement was no more true than the impression he tried to create that Pennsylvania, one of the richest states in the Union, was unable to keep its inhabitants from starving, then all the rest of his testimony should be ignored."

RAPS WELFARE WORKERS

Miss Kilbreth likewise attacked Pinchot's testimony, asserting:

"I hold that this silence of 48 Legislatures and of 47 Governors is more significant than the clamor of all the advocates of this bill. No Governor has applied for help except Gov. Pinchot and Gov. Pinchot's testimony amounts to virtually an appeal to Congress against the Pennsylvania Legislature and the Pennsylvania Constitution."

Peckham also testified that statements by professional welfare workers "who have lived for years on the bounty of charitable people" is entitled to little consideration on a measure that opens an easier source of obtaining money.

ASK LAW TO END BANK FAILURES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—(INS.)—Bank failures virtually would be stopped by the proposal for drastic revision of Federal Reserve machinery in which the rediscount eligibility is broadened to a degree never visualized by the original framers of the reserve act, a high Treasury official declared today.

Admittedly, hoarding of money never can be checked so long as banks fail at the rate of 200 to 300 a month. Once bank failures are checked, however, confidence will be restored and money will move back from hiding to productive channels.

Thus, this official pointed out, the power of the reserve banks to rediscount all types of paper of intrinsic value from the member banks and indirectly through non-member banks on the indorsement of the member institutions, should prove the most important contribution yet made to business recovery.

U. S. Vice-Consul, Jap Sailor Clash

SHANGHAI, Feb. 11.—(INS.)—Arthur R. Ringwalt, American vice consul, had a sharp verbal clash with a Japanese sailor today when he entered the Japanese district of the International Settlement and reported the incident upon his return to the consulate.

Ringwalt went into the Japanese concession to find a 7-year-old Chinese boy of American citizenship, who had been left with servants when his mother went visiting on the day the Japanese began military operations. The child was nowhere to be seen.

JAPANESE CAVALRY OFFICER RAISING FLAG IN KAOPANGTZE

100,000 Parade as Japan Marks Empire Day

TOKIO, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—Japan celebrated its Fourth of July today—the national holiday Kigensetsu—with patriotic demonstrations which reflected the martial events of recent weeks in Manchuria and at Shanghai.

Kigensetsu is the day on which the empire celebrates the supposed anniversary of its founding by Jimmu Tenno, a descendant of the Sun Goodess, in 660 B. C. There were parades by several patriotic organizations, in which about 100,000 persons, mostly youths and school girls, marched behind blaring bands and the national flag.

On the banners which marchers carried were slogans such as:

"Be Loyal to the Emperor," "Love Our Country!" "Don the Steel Helmet and Protect the Fatherland!" "Courage and Service for Country!"

Today's demonstration, however, belonged to a holiday celebration and represented practically the only departure from a dispassionate calm the Japanese have been maintaining despite the presence of thousands of their warriors on Chinese soil.

In other cities outward evidences of a war spirit were entirely lacking. In fact the Japanese people do not consider themselves at war.

14 NOTED WRITERS DRIVEN FROM KENTUCKY, 2 BEATEN

FRANK INJURED, ANDERSON KIDNAPED

International News Service.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 11.—Allan Taub and Waldo Frank, two of 14 noted writers and journalists allegedly abducted by Pineville (Ky.) business men, arrived here early today, suffering the effects of a severe beating.

Frank had been badly beaten about the face and head, and his skull was swathed in bandages. Taub's eyes were blackened, his nose was cut and swollen, and his face and head bruised and lacerated.

Taub and Frank are members of the Writers' Relief Committee for striking Kentucky coal miners. Their wounds had been dressed by Dr. Elsie Reid Mitchell, woman physician and writer, a member of the committee and one of those kidnaped.

OTHERS UNHARMED

Other members of the party were not harmed.

Taub said that he and Frank were ordered to get out of the kidnaper's car, when the Tennessee line was crossed. He said that the abductors then slugged them. He believed they used a car jack, he said.

Senator Alben W. Barkley was apprised by telephone of the affair today and announced from Washington that he would take action if Gov. Ruby Laffoon failed to make an immediate investigation. Efforts were also being made to reach Senator M. M. Logan at Washington.

VERSIONS DIFFER

The kidnaping story differed from the version given out by police at Pineville, who said the writers were arrested and brought before a police magistrate, where they volunteered to leave the state in preference to jail.

Headquarters of the writers' committee here said the arrest was just a ruse to allow the businessmen to kidnap the visiting writers.

Besides Frank and Taub, the expelled writers included Sherwood Anderson, novelist and poet; Malcolm Cowley, an editor of the New Republic; Quincy Howe, editor of Living Age; Edmund Wilson, critic; Polly Boyden, magazine writer; Mary Heaton Vorse, poetess and magazine writer; Lewis Coleman, novelist; Liston M. Oaks, newspaperman; John Henry Hammond, Jr., millionaire journalist; Dr. Mitchell; Ben Leider, novelist, and Alan Max, magazine writer.

RESENT INTERFERENCE

The expulsion and alleged attack were sequels to the opposition of local authorities in Kentucky to what they regard as the interference of the writers in the state's mine strike troubles.

Meanwhile, 35 coal miners occupied cells in the Pineville jail. They were arrested on charges of vagrancy and disorderly conduct when they gathered to receive food and clothing which was to have been distributed here by the writers' committee. Nineteen miners were arrested in a warehouse where they had assembled to receive aid.

The critical situation was intensified by gunfire in Knox County, Kentucky, where Harry Sims, 19, was shot and seriously wounded last night by two sheriff's deputies. The authorities contended Sims was resisting arrest and was stirring up trouble by attempting to lead a group of miners into Pineville to receive the writers' aid.

Gov. Lawrence M. Judd, who asked the Attorney General's office to make the inquiry, would not reveal its results, explaining that to do so at this time would not be for the best public interest.

From unofficial sources it was reported many gangsters and underworld characters had been questioned and had given valuable information.

Mrs. Granville Fortescue and Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, mother and husband of Mrs. Massie, are held with two naval enlisted men for trial next month on a charge of slaying Joseph Kahahawai, native, accused as one of the attackers. The four surviving members of the quintet charged with the attack are to have another trial, the first jury having disagreed.

BLAME SLAYING ON REVENGE IN SWINDLE

Suspect Held in Downtown Shooting Says Victim Took Savings of $7,500

Homicide detectives investigating the fatal shooting of Guiseppi Angelino, 35, of 210 Kearsarge street, in Alderman Thomas Geary's office, in the shadow of the county jail at Fifth and Wylie avenues, said today that the killing was in retribution for a trick by which he "beat" a friend of $7,500.

The friend, Nazzarino Gentile, 50, of Thirteenth street, Ambridge, was being held in connection with the shooting. Detectives said he admitted killing his friend because he was afraid he was "going free."

SUSPECT TELLS STORY

Gentile, questioned at detective headquarters, said:

"The judge talked to him and I heard them say he would be let go. Last year he got me to sign a paper so that I could make 6 per cent on my money, and I signed the paper.

"Since I came to this country in 1903 I have saved my money and I had $7,500 in the bank when Guiseppi told me how to get more interest. Then I signed a paper and he took all my money and played cards. He told me I hadn't any more money."

Late yesterday Angelino was held for court on embezzlement charges preferred by Louis Napoleon, of the Napoleon State Bank, where Angelino had worked as exchange clerk. While Angelino's bond was being prepared, police said Gentile, who had attended the hearing, fired two shots, both of which struck Angelino in the back.

THREE ESCAPE SHOTS

Police said G. E. Benedictus, of 1629 Tustin street; Vincent Santo, of 872 Watson street, and Philomena Polito, of Clay way, a stenographer in the office, who were near Angelino, narrowly escaped being wounded.

Miss Polito, 22, was preparing the bond directly in front of the victim when the bullets were fired. She said:

"I heard two shots. I didn't know they were fired at Angelino until he slumped back at the rail. I thought more shots would be fired, so I placed my hands over by ears and dashed across the hall into the offices of Attorney George Little."

Following the shooting, Gentile fled down the stairs, followed by Constables George J. Henke and Lester Leonard, who also witnessed the killing, but he was captured by Jack Schneider, former constable, as he reached the street.

Bingham Urges Beer As Tax Crisis Solution

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—Extravagant paternalism by the government was charged last night by Senator Bingham (Rep.), Connecticut. He advocated stringent economy, legalizing beer manufacture and letting the federal debt increase as means of avoiding further tax increases.

Citing in a radio address mounting demands on the taxpayer since 1913, Bingham said:

"We simply cannot bear any more tax burdens."

He listed federal aid "or federal subsidies to state governments" as one of the chief items of expenditure in the federal budget, and said the government "is trying to do too many things to do them well." He continued:

"If you want to escape new taxation you must stop demanding service from the federal government, for those services have to be paid for. We shall never have tax relief until we have activity relief."

Brings Children Water, Tucks Them Under Covers; Takes Cookies, Small Change

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—A new type robber—one who tucks his victims' children in bed and gives them water when they are thirsty—bobbed up in police records today.

Dickie Hardy, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hardy, was awakened in his room last night by a prowler. His parents were away. Dickie said:

"Hello, are you a robber?"

The prowler replied:

"No, sonny. I'm just looking through your mamma's pocketbook for a few pennies so I can buy my little boy something to eat."

When the stranger found the purse empty, the boy volunteered:

Dickie, who is recovering from whooping cough, was seized by an attack. The prowler got him a glass of water and then tucked the covers around him.

Walking into another room, where Dickie's sister, Barbara, 3, was asleep, the bandit stumbled over a chair and aroused the girl. She pleaded:

"Daddy, I want a glass of water."

The prowler got the second glass of water, tucked Barbara in as he had Dickie and admonished her to go back to sleep.

When Mr. and Mrs. Hardy returned home they discovered a bag of chocolate cookies, in addition to a few dollars in small change, was missing.

International News Service

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 11.—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's path to the Democratic presidential nomination, already beset by former Gov. Alfred E. Smith's brown derby, was made more difficult today by a Republican resolution creating a legislative committee to "tear the lid off" his administration of New York State's government.

A sweeping investigation of every state department, including Roosevelt's own office, is provided in the resolution jammed through the Senate by the Republicans over vigorous protest of the Democrats.

MOVE KEPT SECRET

The Assembly will adopt the resolution next week and the investigation will get under way early in March as soon as the Legislature adjourns. It will be in full swing just at a time when Gov. Roosevelt is in the midst of his pre-convention campaign for the presidential nomination.

With Legislative probe of Tammany Hall's administration of New York City now in progress and with another Legislative investigation of Democrat administration of the State government on the way, Republican leaders are confident they will be able to do their share in spiking Gov. Roosevelt's presidential aspirations.

The Republican move to investigate the State government came with bomb-like suddenness to both Roosevelt and the Democratic legislators. Not a hint had been dropped by the G. O. P. leaders that such a thing was contemplated, and while the Senate Democrats resorted to every parliamentary maneuver, they were unable to prevent adoption of the resolution. The vote was 27 to 21.

Smith, Raskob, Byrd Meet; Drive on Roosevelt Seen

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—(AP)—Politics drew former Gov. Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia; Alfred E. Smith, and Chairman John J. Raskob, of Democratic National Committee, together today in conference.

Particular importance was attached to their meeting since it was only last Monday that former Gov. Smith declared he would accept the nomination if it were offered to him.

Byrd has been spoken of as Virginia's native son candidate for the nomination. Today's conference was looked upon by political forecasters as the first of a series for the purpose of organizing native son candidates against the campaign of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Roosevelt to Be Boomed At State Parley

HARRISBURG, Feb. 11.—(AP)—Warren K. Vandyke, publicity director of the Pennsylvania Democratic organization, said today Franklin D. Roosevelt's candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination would get strong support tomorrow from a gathering of the party's leaders in Harrisburg.

More than 300 persons will attend a meeting of party workers from 35 central counties, Vandyke said. Congressman Patrick J. Boland, of Scranton, a Roosevelt supporter, will speak. Clarence J. Weary, chairman of the Cumberland County Democratic organization, will preside.

Whether supporters of Alfred E. Smith, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, Newton D. Baker and others mentioned for the nomination will attend is not known.

John Collins, chairman of the state committee, has indicated that he will be present. Collins has repeatedly declared for an uninstructed delegation to the convention.

boom times, they should spend lightly, tax heavily and reduce debt.

Thirdly, by abolishing so called prohibition, a billion dollars in taxes would open up for the federal government, and half a billion for the states and local subdivisions.

Fourthly, Congress should vote AGAINST THE ADMINISTRATION RECOMMENDATION TO INCREASE THE TAX RATE ON PERSONAL AND CORPORATE INCOMES which in the last analysis depends on the variable element of business profits.

British experience shows the utter folly of taxing the spirit of initiative and enterprise beyond its ability to pay.

Fifthly, instead of penalizing efficiency, Congress should look forward to lightening the load of taxes on profits by supplementing federal income with a general sales tax, modeled after the successful Canadian system. A 5 per cent manufacturers' tax would yield an enormous revenue even during subnormal periods.

IF CONGRESS WOULD SCORNFULLY reject the administration's ill considered program and substitute a plan along the lines which leading economists advocate, business would receive an enormous psychological and actual stimulus.

Unless Congress has the initiative and imagination to buck the economic trend, IT WILL BE CAUGHT IN THE VICIOUS CIRCLE.

If poor business necessitates added taxation, then HIGHER TAXES WILL TEND TO MAKE BUSINESS STILL POORER.

On the other hand, if Congress follows the advice of scientific economists and acts to improve the general employment and business situation, then the government will be able to exact higher revenues without additionally burdening the people.

The situation is in the hands of the Democratic Congress and the result will be the test of the democracy's ability to govern wisely and well.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 11.—(INS.)—A bill imposing an increase of 100 per cent on personal income taxes awaited action of the Assembly today. It was passed by the Senate by a vote of 43 to 8. Gov. Roosevelt recommended the income tax boost to help wipe out the state's $124,000,000 deficit.

The Senate also passed a bill increasing the stock transfer tax from 2 cents to 4 cents and boosting the gasoline tax from 2 cents to 3 cents.

NEW U. S. AUTO TAX FOUGHT

The proposed federal excise tax on automobiles, trucks and accessories will cost Pennsylvania motorists more than $13,000,000 each year if it is passed by Congress, the Pittsburgh Motor Club announced today. The tax will add 5 per cent to the cost of passenger cars, 3 per cent for trucks and 2½ per cent on tires and accessories and will bring about $200,000,000 in revenue to the government each year.

C. H. Roth, secretary of the club, said:

"Automotive revenues in the United States last year totaled $1,800,000,000, and the proposed excise tax means an increase of approximately 11 per cent in the revenue burden.

"The motorist made possible our highway system. He has paid for it, and is maintaining it, with a surplus which in many states is being diverted to other purposes. He is unalterably opposed to increasing the tax burden and seeing that increase go toward the maintenance of governmental bureaus, other than highway projects.'

Vote Fraud Prosecution Closes

demurrer and the jury was sent from the courtroom while he gave his argument to the judge.

He contended the evidence against McBride and Schad was identical and that the latter therefore could not be guilty.

ACCUSES KLEIN

Alpert, under questioning, admitted additional assessment book AE, which, it is charged, cantains 922 bogus assessments as the basis for fradulent vote registrations, had been compiled "in a room on the second floor of the City-County Building."

He testified Monday it had been prepared in its proper place, the Tax Board's transcribing room in the Courthouse.

He also admitted today he had told the grand jury Walsh and Klein had given him lists of names to enter on the AE book. He then said this testimony, too, was false, adding:

"Paul came to me and asked me about 'getting some names in down there'. I refused and Paul didn't bother me any more.

"Then Klein came and insisted I put some in. I said 'Why, chief! Don't get yourself in wrong. Do it right."

Klein continued to insist the names be added, Alpert said, and testified finally they were entered in the book.

TELLS OF WORK ON BOOKS

Walsh, Klein, Alpert, McBride and Samuel Ramsey, an assistant chief clerk, were indicted on vote conspiracy charges and now, with the exception of Alpert, are facing a joint trial.

Alpert today testified that "Saul Klein and some other fellows" were working on the assessment book, September 1, the last day for receiving assessments.

Paul Walsh, he said, was "in there off and on during the day."

Alpert said the work on the books was completed late that day, when it was too late "to turn them in."

Although he knew assessors were not allowed to take the books out of the Courthouse, he started to take the AE book home, he continued, but Klein asked him to let him have it so he could copy the names.

Klein returned it to him the next day, Alpert said, and he took it to Secretary McBride and to Ramsay, both of whom refused to have the additional names authorized.

Later, he said, he asked Ramsay:

"What'll I do with it?"

And Ramsay, he said, accepted the list, saying:

"Oh, well, give it to me."

NAMES DEFENDANTS

Charles B. Prichard, defense counsel, apparently seeking to discredit the veracity of the state's witness, asked Alpert:

"What caused you to change your story from the one you told here on Monday?"

He answered:

"I was trying to protect them."

Later in the questioning, Alpert called the two defendants by name, saying:

"I was trying to protect Walsh and Klein."

Prichard asked:

"Did you say you didn't see the affidavits made when you testified here Monday?"

Alpert answered:

"Yes. What I said Monday was a lie."

"You lied Monday under oath?"

The witness nodded his assent.

DENIES BRIBE QUEST

Pritchard then asked:

"Did you meet Saul Klein and Paul Walsh in the hall after court yesterday and say to Klein 'Chief, I can't protect you any longer. I got a sick boy in the hospital and I'm going to protect myself. And didn't you say you wanted $5,000 from Klein?"

Alpert answered:

"No."

Later Prichard asked:

"Didn't you say that somebody else told you to put the names in the book and you were afraid to squawk because they might kill you."

The witness again replied:

"No!"

"Weren't you trying to protect yourself?"

"I was trying to protect both Walsh and Klein."

"Where was it these names were written into the book?"

Alpert replied:

"In an office on the second floor of the City-County Building."

HOOVER URGED TO AID COAL INDUSTRY

Lewis, Miners' Head, Tells Of Distress; Mitchell to Push Decision on Sales

WASHINGTON, Feb 11—(AP)—A petition to President Hoover that he lend "a helping hand" toward enactment of legislation to stabilize the bituminous coal industry was put before the Chief Executive today by John L. Lewis president of the United Mine Workers of America.

The labor leader said he pictured to the President conditions in a [illegible] industry in which the feeding of 15,000 children by the Society of Friends (Quakers) was only touching the edges of the real need.

Lewis was accompanied to the White House by Secretary Doak who said conditions in the bituminous field were not improving and that their conference with Mr. Hoover represented an effort to figure out something.

FAVORS KELLY BILL

Lewis said he advocated support by the administration for the Davis-Kelly bill which would provide a federal licensing system under which some form of pooling and selling agencies might be set up to eliminate wasteful competition, abolition of yellow dog contracts in the bituminous fields and provision for organized collective bargaining by mine workers.

Attorney General Miche, and coal operators representatives are co-operating to expedite a Supreme Court test of a regional sales plan recently indorsed by former Assistant Attorney General William J. Donovan.

SEEKS COURT RULE

The Justice Department head said today he was conferring with the representatives in the hope of bringing the case to decision during this session. Mitchell said:

"It's the kind of a question on which the government would not want to stop short of a decision by the Supreme Court. I suppose the industry feels the same way about it."

U.S. TO APPROVE PRICE FIXING

WASHINGTON Feb 11—(INS)—No objection would be interposed by the government to legislation which would permit a temporary degree of price-fixing curtailment of production and sales quota of arrangements in the distribution of natural resources such as coal, oil and lumber, official sources stated today.

Legislation of this character has been proposed as an emergency measure because of over-production and that prices of products have fallen below production costs in many cases, these being important factors in accentuation the depression.

Officials emphasize however that if anti-trust laws were waived temporarily there must be set up government supervision such as through the Federal Trade Commission to protect the public.

Meanwhile a general investigation of the anti-trust laws was proposed today by the House Judiciary Committee of which Representative Sumners (Dem.) of Texas is chairman. The committee decided to ask the House for authority to make the inquiry employing experts and utilizing the services of lawyers in the Department of Justice.

O'MALLEY TRIAL DELAYED WEEK

District Attorney Andrew T. Park today announced the trial of P. J. O'Malley Second Ward Republican leader and others from the Strip district, indicted on election law violation charges had been postponed until a week from Monday. It had been originally scheduled to start Monday.

Park said the delay was necessary because the First Ward vote conspiracy case now before court would run until Saturday and would not give Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk prosecutor in both cases sufficient time to prepare for the O'Malley trial.

FINANCE HEADS BOOST LOANS

With $60,000,000 reported loaned in Pennsylvania during 1931 by personal finance companies, A. V. Hart, chairman of the executive committee of the Pennsylvania Association of Personal Finance Companies in convention yesterday at the William Penn Hotel said:

"The past two years have proved there is a real need for personal financing. Compare $60,000,000 with $15,000,000 loaned only a few years ago. Economists and welfare workers during the past year have admitted the necessity of this business."

SCHOOLEY JURY NOT TO INDICT

No further indictments will be returned as a result of the probe made this week by the February grand jury into the affairs of deposed City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, it was learned at the District Attorney's office.

A short presentment may be made to Judge Elder W. Marshall tomorrow. If necessary to bring further prosecutions, this can be done by making informations.

Reports that the renewed investigation might bring probes of other city departments because of the calling of Samuel J. Grenet, chairman of the Twenty-seventh Ward, Congressman P. J. Sullivan, Henry Dapper, secretary-treasurer of the Fort Pitt Brewing Company, of which Grenet is the head, and bankers before a grand jury were denied by District Attorney Andrew T. Park.

Former Army Chief, Legislator in Clash

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 11—(AP)—Angered by what he termed a reflection upon his honesty of purpose by a State Senator, Gen. Charles P. Summerall, United States Army, retired, walked out of a Senate committee hearing yesterday announcing he would resign "within six hours" as president of the Citadel, the state military college.

The Senate Finance Committee in executive session was hearing the former chief of staff upon the annual appropriation for the Citadel, of which he has been president since last September. A deficit of $19,000 in operating expenses of the school was mentioned.

Actually over 40—

"I am over 40!"
MARY BOLAND
"There's no magic about keeping the charm of youth," says this popular Broadway star who triumphed last season in The Vinegar Tree. "It's just a matter of regular complexion care. For years I've used Lux Toilet Soap."

"I'm over 45!"
NANCE O'NEIL
"It is said that a woman is as old as she looks, and a man as old as he feels," says this famous star of the stage and screen. "Several years ago, I discovered that regular care with Lux Toilet Soap would do wonders for my skin and I use it regularly."

"I'm over 40!" says NAZIMOVA
"Only the woman who looks it is afraid to admit her age," says this famous screen star who is now winning fresh laurels on Broadway in Mourning Becomes Electra. "For years I have used Lux Toilet Soap and my skin is so smooth."

. . . But these lovely stars know the Secret of keeping Youthful Charm

ANY woman can laugh at birthdays—if she is wise. The recent photographs above are proof of it! "Very few actresses look their age, you notice," says lovely Alla Nazimova. "It is easy to be lovely at sixteen or seventeen, but to be still lovelier at thirty, at forty, and over . . . well, that is easy, too, if a woman is wise."

Because keeping youthful charm is vitally important to them, actresses take vigilant care of their skin. You will want to know how!

9 out of 10 Screen Stars use it

One favorite soap keeps lovely 98% of the exquisite complexions you see on the screen. Of the 613 important actresses in Hollywood, including all stars, 605 use Lux Toilet Soap for their skin. The stage stars, too, prefer this gentle, fragrant white soap.

Horne's

83rd Anniversary

. . . . BEGINS TOMORROW!

Here is the great Birthday Party which Pittsburgh has been expectantly awaiting, and to which everybody is cordially invited!

Thrift and economy are uppermost in the public mind at the moment. The Horne Anniversary Sale is the supreme thrift event, because it brings new spring merchandise of the most desirable quality, at prices which are made for no other occasion. Every department of the store participates, and practically every seasonable and staple want of man, woman, and child—person and home—is met with special prices in this sale.

The opportunity for great public service and friend-making is present this year as never before. Therefore, instead of curtailing, as general business conditions might warrant, we have enlarged the scope of this year's Sale, in the belief that it is in times like these that leaders assert themselves and history is made. The 83rd Anniversary Sale forecasts the greater Horne's of the future!

The grand march starts 9 A. M. tomorrow!

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough due to a cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It is also absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. At the same time, it promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in those severe coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest medicinal agents for severe coughs and bronchial irritations.

LISTENING IN-- :-: With the Radio Editor

American radio listeners will not hear the broadcast of the Papal Benediction tomorrow morning at 6 o'clock by Pope Pius XI.

Both WCAE and KDKA had arranged to present this feature, which was to have been carried on both networks of the National Broadcasting Company, but radio engineers declared that atmospheric conditions on short wave channels across the Atlantic Ocean at the sunrise hour would make impossible reception good enough for rebroadcasting in this country.

TONIGHT'S HIGHLIGHTS

Lillian Roth, until recently star comedienne of Earl Carroll's "Vanities," is guest artist on WCAE's 8 o'clock program featuring Ray Perkins and Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees. Miss Roth is one of the favorite younger players of vaudeville and musical comedy, and in addition has appeared in several motion pictures, notably "The Vagabond King" with Dennis King. Walter Winchell's "magic carpet" carries WCAE listeners at 10 o'clock to Lake Placid, scene of the Olympic winter sports competitions, now under way. Joe Moss and his orchestra will provide scintillating tunes, and in addition several international champion athletes will be presented to the radio audience.

ON KDKA the Westinghouse Pioneers, directed by Zoel Parenteau, present at 7:45 a program including "The Sleigh," by Kountz, a former Pittsburgher. The Frank Crumit-Julia Sanderson offerings at 9 include "Down by the Wineglass Works" and "A Year From Today." The Songsmiths, male quartet, give a medley of favorite Stephen Collins Foster tunes on the 9:30 program, and at 10 the Gypsies will be heard in a medley of popular old-time dance numbers.

WJAS features Mrs. Sinclair Lewis, who will be interviewed by Margaret Santry at 8, and Abe Lyman's Band and Glee Club at 8:15. At 9, the Mills Brothers own popular arrangements include "Limehouse Blues" and "Let That Be a Lesson to You." Irene Beasley, Southern songbird, and Freddie Rich's Band are on the 9:15 broadcast from Lake Placid, where Ted Husing will describe some of the thrills of the Olympic sports. Natalie Alt, musical comedy star, is guest artist during the "Backstage" program at 9:45.

* * *

KQV'S PLAYERS at 9 offer "An Old Spanish Custom," written by Adrian R. Cooper, their director. It's all about a night club cigaret girl and a tobacco grower, and has a surprise ending. Elmer J. Waltman, the minstrel man, brings back "Henry and His Boss" at 8, and introduces Tony, a new character, played by himself.

Fan Fare

CHARLOTTE SHALLENBERGER, WCAE golden-haired soprano, sings "Indian Love Call" by special permission tonight at 7:15.

Don Bestor's "Raggedy Ann" feature at Saturday noon on KDKA is going over in a big way with the youngsters.

Maybe you can solve the mystery of the "Singing Chef," appearing on WJAS, who keeps his identity a secret. There are several clues. For one thing, he is said to have made more recordings than any other vocalist, but is labeled on the various discs under different names. He is adept at impersonating celebrities. Now, does that help you any?

Organization of a Pittsburgh Kate Smith Club will be announced on her regular WJAS broadcast at 8:30 tonight. Clifford James is president; Albert H. Haskell, secretary, and Chester Twigg, treasurer. The club has 12 members and it is officially "Kate Smith Club No. 38."

Eddie Cantor and his program were voted the most popular radio feature in a recent poll by the Nebraska News.

Tony Wons is going to take a trunkful of "Scrapbooks" with him on his vaudeville trip. The rotund Jacques Renard is thinking of raising a goatee to compete with Paul Whiteman's mustache . . . Bebe Daniels will be Rudy Vallee's guest artist a week from tonight . . . Nick Lucas flew to Kansas City from New York on his way to Denver and they charged him half-fare for three guitars . . . Graham Harris, who conducts the Sherlock Holmes programs, is forming a symphony orchestra at Schenectady . . . When Lucille Black made her first appearance in "Real Folks," her giggle gave her away as the Nit-Wits' famous Countess Molka-de-Polka.

Bucksport (Me.) is the old home of Dustin and William Farnum and was the site of the play, "The Old Homestead," but the Stebbins Boys' "Bucksport Point" isn't on the map.

RADIO'S MASTER-MIND, Col. Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle, locked himself up in his research laboratory the other day and perfected what he claimed to be a vest-proof bullet, which will penetrate anything but a vest, thus making bullet-proof vests obsolete. He says he did it by crossing an ordinary bullet with a dead moth.

Incidentally, the colonel's earlier invention of a cellophane umbrella—so that the owner could see if it had stopped raining—was not taken as a joke by Henry Grossman, assistant chief engineer at CBS. Grossman actually made such a contrivance and is now boosting it seriously for its advantages in enabling pedestrians to get clear views so as to avoid other pedestrians, automobiles and street cars in heavy downpours.

Have Color in Checks

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should try Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets — a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 20 years of study.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

BACK STIFF— TROUBLED AT NIGHT

Coatesville, Pa.—"At one time I was the most miserable of men, my back was so stiff and sore that I could not do any work without suffering. I had absolutely no control of the bladder (day or night) and I noticed a sediment like brick dust," said Levi R. Ebelhar, of 335 Charles St. "Finally I purchased at the drug store a bottle of Dr. Pierce's A-nuric Tablets and that bottle of medicine surely did do wonders for me. The urine cleared up, and my kidneys and bladder ceased to give distress." Ask your druggist for

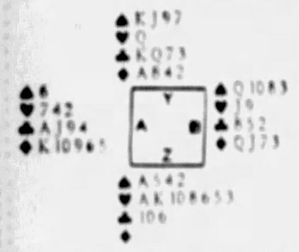
Contract Bridge -:- OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Good and Bad Discarding



Z made an opening bid of 2-Hearts, under the Official System bidding. Had he not been so strong in spades he might have trusted his partner for two tricks and made a pre-emptive declaration of 4-Hearts. A passed, Y took out with 2-No Trumps; B passed. As the opening bidder of a semi-demand bid of two promises another bid, his partner is prohibited from jumping the make, for all Z knew there might be a slam in the hand, so he bid only 3-Hearts, which Y shifted to 3-No Trumps. When Z bid 4-Hearts, Y jumped to 6-Hearts.

The opening lead was A's 6 of Spades which read right for a fourth best lead (6 from 11 leaves 5, with all 5 visible). Dummy's 7 was played in the belief that it would hold the trick, unless B could trump. When B's 8 covered, Z had to put up his A, and it became clear that the opening lead was either a singleton or from the double 6—3, or possibly an intermediate lead from Q-6-3. As A almost certainly held at least four of one or the other minor suit any one of the three possible combinations from which A must have led his spade rather clearly marked him with possession of either, or both, the missing A of clubs and K of diamonds, only the first of which was of especial interest to the declarer.

Without thinking as long as he should have done, Z put dummy in the lead with a heart, played the A of diamonds, and discarded his lowest club. Z led and trumped a low diamond, then pulled all opposing hearts. Z calculated that he could not fulfil contract unless A held the A of clubs, or the Q of spades. He thought that in case A held the A of clubs, the latter would play it when Z led his last card of that suite. Such an act by A would leave the K-Q of clubs in dummy available for two discards of spades, insuring fulfilment of the small slam contracts, without regard to where the missing Q of spades lay. But A upset plans by withholding his ace, and allowing dummy to win the club trick. Z was in a hole, from which the only escape was that A held the missing Q of spades. The declarer trumped a lead of a diamond, then lead a spade. When A failed to follow suit there was nothing to be done except give B two spade tricks and be penalized one trick.

Had Z discarded a spade when he led Y's top diamond, he could have made his small slam. If Z had been able to twice lead clubs from his own hand it would have made no difference whether A won the first club trick or let Y win. In case A won the first club trick, the K-Q left in dummy would have given Z one discard of a spade, so that no trick could be lost in that suit. If A let dummy win the first club trick, Z could have returned to his own hand by ruffing a diamond, then he could have led his last club. Whether A won or passed that lead could make no difference. Played in this way ultimately Z could win 2 spade, 7 heart, 2 club and 1 diamond trick, 12 tricks total.

City Club Hears Conrad Nagel, Film Star

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

One thing the motion picture industry is most desirous of is honest criticism; it suffers from wisecracking criticism, Conrad Nagel, film star, told 100 members of the Woman's City Club at luncheon yesterday.

Mr. Nagel, quite as handsome as his audience had expected him to be and a surprisingly good speaker, explained that the "little tour" which he is making is partly in the interest of the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences, an organization which is seeking to advance the art and science of pictures, to eliminate internal discord and to further public understanding of the industry.

No other group of people is so misunderstood and misrepresented, Mr. Nagel observed, going on to show that copy is always made from the unusual and that in proportion to the population, the unusual is not more frequent in Hollywood than in any other community. For instance, one hears tales of the fabulous salaries paid to motion picture stars and as a matter of fact his own investigations showed that only 23 per cent of the 25,000 players in Hollywood were receiving big salaries. Viewing it from another angle, the speaker said if every star were to receive one-half of one cent from every person who sees a finished picture, the star's income would be far in excess of the salary paid by the producer.

Fabulous Salaries

The industry suffers, too, from censorship, picking on the movies has come to be a minor racket, Mr. Nagel observed. He pointed out that censorship is based on personal prejudice and not on any standard of culture or good taste and even the censors' viewpoints are rarely harmonious.

Miss Ruth Marsh, Mr. Nagel's leading woman in his personal appearances, shared honors at the luncheon.

THE USE OF BOWS IN EVENING GOWNS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 11. — The crisp frock with bows takes a bow as the evening success of the present season both in town and at the delectable southern winter resorts. Although of course one sees chiffons and semi-sheers as well as satins in profusion, one is conscious of the growing importance of crisp taffetas and aristocratic moires, dramatic materials both. Lots can be done by a clever designer with taffeta, faille or any of the crisp weaves, to make what we know as the important frock. And of course that is where the stiff broad bow comes in. But whether crisp or clinging, the bow is omnipresent on the newest frocks, but the insipid look that a bow can bestow on even the nicest frock is neatly avoided.

* * *

CRISP TAFFETA bows are used to suggest rather than deliberately create a bustle effect, something that was more a success in the dressmaking places than when actually worn. Somehow the bustle effect does not fit in with our idea of the modern form, the form that some of us work so hard to obtain. We are proud of our slim, svelte lines and want dresses that will display rather than obscure them. And so we have bows that vaguely suggest rather than define. But to get back to the material consideration of the mode. If you like taffeta, moire, or faille, gratify that liking this season and you will be very much a la mode. See to it that your frock strikes a dramatic note, that it is a "grand" frock, and your poise and sophisticated manner will be one with it.

* * *

WE OFFER a sketch of a very lovely evening frock by Maggy Rouff. It is fashioned of changeable plum and green taffeta. At the front the bodice has a modest decolletage mounting high over each shoulder and passing into a wide scarf which ties in a crisp bow at the back of the neck. A larger bow, apparently coming from the drawn-in sides of the bodice, is knotted at the apex of the deep V decolletage in the back.

TWO MEN -:- Lincoln and Booth In Drama

Play 'If Booth Had Missed' Brings Memories of Lincoln's End

By GEORGE SEIBEL

A play is now on the boards in New York City under the title "If Booth Had Missed," and it seems that the author, Arthur Goodman, has not missed. It is a drama about the immortal Lincoln, whose birthday comes tomorrow. The conjuncture of this play and the Lincoln celebration brings to mind the tragic relation between our theatrical history and Lincoln's death.

George Seibel

The world has almost forgotten that the assassin of Abraham Lincoln was the brother of Edwin Booth. Our best-beloved player retired from the stage for awhile after our best-beloved President had been killed.

Laurence Hutton, one of the founders of the Players Club, housed in Edwin Booth's old home, told about Booth's picking up the death mask of Lincoln on a visit to Hutton's library. Booth asked, innocently enough, whose it was. Hutton told him, his heart almost stopping to beat.

Booth rose from his seat, took the mask in his hands and looked at it for a long time without a word. The whole awful business must have come back to him—the mad dead brother; the martyred murdered President.

Hutton says that Booth, without a word, put the mask back into its place, "and it seemed to me that as he did so he kissed it with his hands."

THE LINCOLN TRAGEDY

Abraham Lincoln was killed in a box of Ford's Theater in the city of Washington, during a performance of Tom Taylor's comedy "Our American Cousin." This is the play in which the father of E. H. Sothern made his great hit as Lord Dundreary, but Sothern was not in that cast. The author of the play, Tom Taylor, also wrote "The Fool's Revenge," which gave Edwin Booth one of his most famous parts.

On the night when "Our American Cousin" was played with such a tragic finale, Laura Keene was the star, and this once famous actress had appeared in the role of Florence Trenchard over 1,000 times. Edwin Booth had just finished playing his Hamlet 100 consecutive nights, the longest run of any Shakespearian play in America up to that time.

The killing of Lincoln by Edwin's brother, John Wilkes Booth, was itself a tragic climax which only a player would have staged as the murderer did. While Lincoln was watching the comedy, the assassin, a Southern sympathizer, forced his way into the President's box and fired his pistol at Lincoln. Then he leaped to the stage, breaking his leg in the jump, and struck a theatrical pose, crying: "Sic semper tyrannis!" the Latin motto of the state of Virginia, meaning "So all tyrants shall perish."

WILKES BOOTH KILLED

He escaped by the stage door, but was pursued and killed a few days later, though there has been a legend that he got away and lived many years. There are similar legends about Ney, Napoleon's marshal, and the Lost Dauphin, son of Louis XVI. The stories that John Wilkes Booth lived many years after he was supposed to be killed have very little credibility.

As for Edwin Booth, overwhelmed with grief and horror, he retired from the stage. Almost a year later, when his friends had convinced him that the public did not hold him responsible for a brother's guilt, he reappeared as Hamlet in the New York Winter Garden.

That scene is one the American people may ever be proud of. When Hamlet came upon the stage, the vast audience arose and greeted him with cheers. No one held our best-beloved player responsible for the death of our best-beloved President.

BOUND TO BE TRAGEDY

The new play, "If Booth Had Missed," is a speculative drama showing what might have happened if Lincoln had not been killed. Author Goodman lets the Negro porter Sambo save Lincoln from the assassin. Then begins a new tragedy. Lincoln, "with malice toward none, with charity for all," begins the noble work of reconciliation with the South, while Thad Stevens, who is villain of the piece, opposes him with the help of Stanton and Grant. An effort is made to impeach Lincoln, just as they did with Andrew Johnson, his successor. Lincoln is acquitted by a bare one-third vote, and then is shot by an editor of the opposition press.

The play seems to have made a deep impression. Daniel Poole is playing Lincoln, and Fred Eric, who once directed the stock company in Pittsburgh, is playing Wilkes Booth.

Ballad of Youth

When I am old, I shall look back to this:
The breath of purple lilacs in the Spring,
The frail remembrance of your gentle kiss,
The rosy glow of youth in everything.

But time will take its old relentless way
And rob me of my bits of happiness,
And leave me nothing but a yesterday
Wrapped in a little shroud of loneliness.

Though I shall count each moment that I knew,
Like some sad miser fingering his gold,
Perhaps I'll be content to think of you
As just a memory . . . when I am old.

But now, my dear, love's sweet and I am young,
Tnd life, without you is a song . . . half sung.

Form of Criticism

He even drove the idle actors in front of the Palace crazy by having some riveters work nearby so that the hambos couldn't hear themselves talk . . . And then he lost a bet. It bothered him so much—he ate his heart out—and died of indigestion!

The Squelch Proper

Niles always snaps:

"Neither has Grant, buddy, neither has Grant!"

Ted Cook: Happy as a circulating library with a new banned novel, also: Charming as the manager of an apartment house before you move in.

O, Mr. Mencken!

Gag

The other night, backstage of the Apollo Theater, Willie Howard, chief funmaker in George White's "Scandals," was showing White a magnet that he said was worth millions of dollars.

"What do you mean, millions?" asked George.

"Well, explained Willie, "this magnet is a minature imitation of a large one a German inventor is building. He plans to take it out in the ocean at spots where steamships laden with valuables are sunk. He will put it into operation there and the magnet will draw the ship up, and presto, we'll be rich."

"The only trouble with that," said George, "is with your luck the only thing that magnet will bring up will be herrings."

Boff! And How-ard!

Willie was the guest of some friends, with Mrs. Howard, a few days before last Christmas. The talk revolved about expenditures and presents.

"Oh, by the way," said Mrs. Howard to Willie, "I think you should get me a new ermine coat for my birthday next week."

"Yeah?" said Willie. "After buying you that diamond bracelet for Christmas! Where do you think I'll get the money?"

"Say, listen," snapped Mrs. H. "I'm no banker. I didn't marry you to give you financial advice!"

Evening Matters

"Whatever became of that nifty that this Dept. pulled with Harry Richman at the Palace, you know—the one that ends: 'Well, it is physically impossible to hiss and yawn—at the same time!'?"

"It's now in the 'Three Little Girls' movie."

Sotto Voce

Marian Lampe: Your rhymes don't jell, Marian. Try again.

Theresa Marcus: He is commercially hooked up on an exclusive contract. Perhaps some day it may be arranged.

A. D. (Taxi Driver): Thanks. He has hurt taxi drivers a lot, I know. He can't last much longer, don't worry.

Haw!

The Peter Arnos (Lois Long) who were divorced recently still are pals. That is, they share their only child now and then. The other week-end Mr. Arno had the child, and when he sent it back to his ex-wife, he sent a new doggie with the baby.

The hound, however, distresses Lois, because it whines all night. So she has named it: "Arno's Revenge."

Sport Stars In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

American athletes scored a big lead at the opening of the winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N. Y., with 17 nations competing. The event is seen in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, being seen in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. There are thrilling pictures of Jack Shea, a Dartmouth sophomore, easily capturing the 500-meter skating race, while Irving Jaffe, of New York, wins the 5,000-meter race in a close finish. There are scenes of the 25-mile musher race over the snow-clad Adirondack Mountains, which race was won by Emile St. Goddard, of Manitoba, who beat the veteran Leonard Seppala and his famous huskies. The picture ends with scenes of the Norwegian team practicing for the coming six contests. The Globe Trotter gives a vivid description of all events.

Senator Frederick Hale, of Maine, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, sounds a warning of American naval unpreparedness. The Senator declares that many of our vessels are obselete and the government should replace them as rapidly as possible to keep up to the agreed ratio between Great Britain, the United States and Japan.

SPRING ON WAY

From Pine Island, N. H., come pictures of the diving Brownies as they go through their midwinter water stunts. Girls and men plunge into the icy waves from heights of 40 to 70 feet.

In Coral Gables, Fla., lives Tom Reed, who raises ducks. Tom apparently has mastered the duck language and seems to be able to carry on a conversation with his charges.

GOODBYE, ALIENS

Exclusive pictures of Uncle Sam's intensified drive on the deportation of undesirable aliens comes from Ellis Island. Several hundred of those who have been convicted are shown eating their last meal on American soil.

Congressman Sol Bloom, of New York, presides at the Philadelphia Mint ceremony of striking off the Washington Bicentennial medal that is to be presented to President Hoover. It is the first medal to be made in the mint from platinum.

NOT GOING OUT OF BUSINESS

Hollywood to Put Politics On Screen With Powell In the Star Role

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, by King Features Syndicate)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 11.

With the whole country talking politics, it was only a question of which studio would be the first to recognize a golden opportunity.

Warner Brothers seem to have won. At least, they are rushing William Powell into a picture called "The Dark Horse." Preparations are cloaked with so much secrecy that I had to dig hard to get these details.

William Powell

You will guess, of course, that the camouflage is to enable them to get the jump on the other studios.

And apparently, they'll pull off the coup. Joseph Jackson has nearly completed the treatment, and production is only a short time off.

"The Dark Horse" deals with a campaign for governorship. Jack Warner and his associates ruled out the presidential idea out of deference to the dignity of the office. A consideration, incidentally, which didn't occur to the authors of New York's new hit, "Of Thee I Sing."

Paramount, bless it for the chuckle, has changed the title of "The Beach Combers" to "Sinners in the Sun" . . . Old-fashioned bangs are the new rage in Hollywood. Carole Lombard is the latest exponent . . . It rained so hard yesterday that the noise on the roofs of the stages stopped all companies at the Paramount studio . . . Two weeks from today, Uncle Carl Laemmle will celebrate his twenty-fourth anniversary in the motion picture business. It was on February 24, 1908, that he opened the White Front Theater in Chicago . . . Ann Harding will be official hostess when the World War veterans of the Rainbow Division meet here next July. Her father, the late Gen. George Grant Gatley, was second in command of this outfit . . . Wilson Mizner recollects he has always owned or had an interest in a restaurant because he hasn't got a home and it's a swell place to sit around.

HE'LL BE PAPA NOW

Maybe there's something in these motion picture titles after all. Just a few weeks ago, Slim Summerville made a Universal film called "The Unexpected Father." Now he and his wife have adopted a three-months-old orphan baby. It's a boy and they'll call him Elliott. Slim and his wife are childless.

NILS GETS BREAK

The talkies have brought a series of disappointments to Nils Asther. But fate, alias Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, relents at last. Nils will play an important role in Robert Montgomery's new picture, "The Truth Game." I'm telling no secret when I say that the Swedish actor was dejected over his failure to get the part of the baron in "Grand Hotel." His new role, if it's any solace, will be that of a prince.

Rod La Rocque

Water; Hate In Film

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Law of the Sea" came to the Sheridan Square screen yesterday for a three-day engagement. It is a talking reunion of the oldtimers, but not much else.

Three veterans of the silents—William Farnum, Priscilla Dean and Ralph Ince—are prominent in the cast. Priscilla gets the best break. She's permitted to commit suicide early in the story.

Farnum is a sea captain, whose life is ruined by Rascal Ince. His eyes grow dim, he becomes blind, but the spark of hate and desire for revenge burns like an arclight in his heart as he sits, night after night, eating baked beans with his growing son.

Years later he hears a fiendish laugh and recognizes it as belonging to Mr. Ince. Well, the big fight is on and by the time a roomful of furniture is reduced to debris, Mr. Farnum emerges the victor. And you must admit he's a spry, elderly gentleman.

Sally Blane is dragged into the story as the heroine. She ends up in the arms of Farnum's son. The latter isn't such a hero, however. He falls for a city girl about the first time he sees her just because she sews a button on his coat.

There are shipwrecks, ships aflame and a lot of angry water. But it's a wishy-washy melodrama. To those old sea dramas that came out of Hollywood 15 years ago, add dialogue and you'll know what we mean.

Jekyll, Hyde Here Again

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" is the new film feature in the Enright. It will be seen two more days.

This is the Frederic March starring picture that recently ran for 11 days in the Warner. All of the critics got a thrill out of it at that time.

The film takes some liberties with Mr. Stevenson's original. But it can be said that Dr. Jekyll is the same old Mr. Hyde.

The story, as about everyone knows, concerns a doctor who drinks a self-made potion and becomes a fiend. Which shows that Author Stevenson had a great imagination. He created his dual character long before bootleg liquor existed.

Dick Powell continues as master of ceremonies. Vaudeville acts feature Hibbitt and Hartman, the Five Maxellos and others.

* * *

Next Monday the Nixon box office will be telling the folks the news about tickets for the new Ziegfeld musical show, "Hot-Cha," which has a book by Lew Brown, Ray Henderson and Mark Hellinger. The locale is Mexico and a toreador is a prominent figure. Bert Lahr will be the chief cut-up and Buddy Rogers, Lynn Overman, Marjorie White and others will be in it too.

Small Timer says the movies have put the kibosh on the idea that silence is golden.

HOME-BUILDING SEEN AS SPUR TO BUSINESS

Lumber Dealers Told Prosperous Era Nears; Pent-Up Demand Seen

America is on the verge of a home building wave that will definitely turn the wave of depression into one of prosperity, Arthur A. Hood, Chicago, president of the Associated Leaders of Lumber and Fuel Dealers of America, told the twenty-fifth annual convention of Retail Lumber Dealers Association of Western Pennsylvania at its opening session yesterday in the William Penn Hotel.

Hood compared the predicted upturn with the home construction expansion of 1922 and 1923, which followed the depression of 1921.

Hood maintained that there is a pent-up demand for inexpensive homes of quality that is about to break and lead the country into another era of prosperity. He continued:

"A dollar spent for a home buys five times the actual manual labor as a dollar spent for anything else. It is safe to say that more than a third of the 7,000,000 unemployed today are dependent upon building occupations."

Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson and Strickland Gillhan, of Washington, will be the speakers at the banquet tonight.

Vigilantes Hunt Bandits, Find Stray Dog

CANBY, Minn., Feb. 11 (AP.)—It was the dead of night. Steam whistles sounded. The fire bell was rung.

The constable got on the job. So did vigilante sharpshooters. They surrounded the depot.

And just when everybody was all set to kill a couple of bandits, out trotted a dog.

The animal had knocked over a telephone in an effort to escape the building, and the telephone operator, failing to get a response, decided it was time to sound an alarm.

TERROR REIGNS IN SALVADOR

PANAMA CITY, Feb. 11 (AP.)—Letters received here from El Salvador today said that although the capital, San Salvador, was quiet, a "reign of terror" prevailed in various pueblos in the republic following reported Communist outbreaks and attempts to suppress them.

An American missionary named McNaught was said to be isolated in the town of Chalatenango, where he went to distribute Bibles in spite of warnings from his friends, now fear any effort on their part to reach him would result in their being shot, the reports said.

Many missionaries were reported to have been executed, but it was not known whether any of them were Americans.

TOWNSHIP MEN RAP PINCHOT

The Pennsylvania Association of Township Supervisors in their election yesterday decisively defeated the group which has been advocating Gov. Pinchot's policy in taking over 20,000 miles of township roads.

J. Garfield Bagshaw, of Blair County, president-elect of the supervisors, declares that the men who supported him in the election did so because they believe in home rule and want no more powers taken away from the township authorities by the State Highway Department. He said:

"We needed to get back in our association to the fundamentals of local government."

The convention went on record in a resolution opposing all state legislation tending toward centralization of power.

"DOPE NOT FOR MY CHILD!"

MOTHERS—here are the vital facts about cough syrups!—many rely on DOPE for their results! DOPE means morphine, ether, chloroform, opiates and narcotics.

Don't risk these dope-drugged syrups! Don't do it! You can now stop your child's cough safely. Smith Brothers' Triple Action Cough Syrup contains absolutely NO DOPE (not even a trace!)—no drugs—nothing that could harm a delicate child. Instead of dope the far more efficient but SAFE principle of "Triple Action" gets rid of the cough quickly, surely and pleasantly. (Pleasantly, because Smith Brothers' tastes good.) Only 35c.

"I have 5 children, from 1 year to 15 years of age. I've been using every kind of cough syrup. Last winter when they had coughs, I bought a bottle of Smith Brothers'. Their cough drop-prairie the magic. They take the 'ouch' out of it too." Mrs. Margaret Robillard, New York City.

"I've smoked LUCKIES for three years"

A TINY LITTLE FOX

Sidney Fox is just a fraction of an inch under five feet and weighs all of ninety-four pounds. In her first motion picture, Sidney occupied the star's dressing room. She clicked immediately in UNIVERSAL'S "Strictly Dishonorable" and slays 'em in "MURDERS IN THE RUE MORGUE." Sidney has smoked LUCKIES three years. She's not only been kind to her throat, but also kind to the makers of LUCKY STRIKE in donating that friendly statement.

"I've smoked LUCKIES for three years. I've tried almost every other brand and found that LUCKIES are truly the only cigarettes that do not hurt my throat. Talking pictures make it even more important for an actress to keep her throat in perfect condition. And I think the new Cellophane tab is slick."

GUM-DIPPED CORDS

The Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process transforms the cotton cords into a strong, tough, sinewy unit. Liquid rubber penetrates every cord and coats every fiber, guarding against internal friction and heat, greatly increasing the strength of the cord body, and giving longer tire life.

TWO EXTRA CORD PLIES UNDER THE TREAD

This is a patented construction, and the two extra cord plies are so placed that you get 56% stronger bond between tread and cord body, and 26% greater protection against punctures and blowouts. It sets a new standard for tire performance on high speed cars.

Quiet, Safe, Long-Wearing Non-Skid Tread

COUNTY TO JOIN UTILITY RATE BATTLE

THREE RALLIES WILL DEMAND REDUCTIONS

McCloskey to Lead Attack At Johnstown Meeting; McGovern Pledges Action

Allegheny County was preparing today to add its support to the overwhelming state-wide fight against excessive public utility rates as leaders of the Pennsylvania Fair Rate Association planned three public mass meetings to continue mobilization of the domestic consumer to force legislative reform.

County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern was on record as promising to take up the fight next Tuesday. He said:

"At the next Commissioners' meeting, I will offer a resolution calling upon the utilities to make reductions in their rates commensurate with decreased costs of other commodities."

Definite action is being awaited from City Council. Councilman Charles Anderson is leading a move for rate test cases on electricity and gas. Civic and trade groups were continuing to rally to the support of the state-wide attack being lead by the rate association.

DUQUESNE ENROLLS

Duquesne Business Men's Association today was definitely supporting the drive with plans to request the borough council participation in the state association. The business men joined the group last night, following outline of the objectives by the state association Executive Chairman Harry Wohlwend and C. V. Shoup, secretary of the Allied Boards of Trade. H. E. Levine was named committee chairman, with Albert Vale and John Waite.

As the Mt. Oliver Business Men's Association prepared to discuss participation at its meeting next month, the state group's plans will be heard before the Duquesne Heights Civic Association and the Beechview Civic League members tonight. Wohlwend addressed the Mt. Oliver leaders last night and Shoup will speak at tonight's two meetings.

The three rallies are called for Johnstown, West End-Elliott district and North Braddock.

JOHNSTOWN MEETING

Mayor Eddie McCloskey will preside at tomorrow night's meeting at Johnstown. Representatives from all communities of Cambria County have been invited to attend with domestic consumers. The state organization's officers, including President A. B. Davidson, of Tarentum; Treasurer John Rhoads, Wilkinsburg; Executive Committeemen Wohlwend, Greentree and S. S. Baldridge, Apollo, with Shoup, are scheduled speakers.

The meeting will be the first of a series to be held throughout the state in organizing counties.

West End-Elliott consumers will hold a public demonstration Monday night in the Thaddeus Stevens School auditorium, South Main street. The meeting will be sponsored by the Forty-fifth Congressional Committee of the Rate Association, of which O. W. Haselbarth is chairman.

Heselbarth announced today that Ward Chairman H. J. Neeley will preside. Speakers will include Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, burgess of McKees Rocks, and a state representative, and Chairman Haselbarth.

EAST BOROUGHS RALLY

East Boroughs will rally at Scott High School, North Braddock, Tuesday night. The association's officers will be speakers. Milton Koontz, of Braddock, arranging the meeting, has issued invitations to Councilmen and Burgesses of all surrounding communities.

The North Side Board of Trade yesterday made application for membership in the association. Joseph Bash, real estate dealer and member of the board, was appointed a delegate.

At the same time it was announced that Councilman Walter J. Baker, chairman of the Public Utility Committee of West View Borough Council, had been named as delegate to represent that body in the association.

Lamp Rays Give Strength To Dwellers in Zoo

Juliet, the lioness, and Duke, the tiger, are recovering from their attacks of rickets at Highland Park Zoo under the rays of ultra-violet ray lamps installed three weeks ago by Westinghouse engineers, it was learned today from Arnold Schaumann, supervisor of animals.

Today the animals were able to leap from the floor of their cages to wall shelves three feet from the floor, Schumann said. Before the ray treatment, they could stand for only a few minutes.

P. S. C. Investigator Charges Gas Firm Hid Millions in Profits

HARRISBURG, Feb. 11.—(INS.)—Details of the financial setup of the Duquesne Gas Corporation, through whose transactions its purchaser, Furlaud, Reuter & Co., New York investment house, were alleged to have made excessive profits, were revealed to the Public Service Commission today.

The commission endeavored to show that through sale and resale of the gas properties by affiliated companies, the New York firm profited in excess of $2,000,000 during the 10 months it held control of the company.

J. H. Wilhelm, an accountant for the Public Service Commission, told Commissioners George W. Woodruff and J. W. Brown that shortly after the Furlaud firm gained control of the gas corporation, an entirely new financial setup was arranged.

On November 30, 1930, he testified, the fixed capital of the company was valued at $6,784,136.79. On May 31, 1931, the value was re-established as $7,225,530.

Wilhelm explained the increase resulted from an exchange of oil leases through which the Duquesne company received 174 leases. Although this property was valued previously at $840,000, it was recorded on the company's books, according to Wilhelm, at a valuation of $1,095,000.

Through exchange of the properties and a cash consideration of $12,235.50, Wilhelm explained the gas company was enabled to make a capital write-up of $246,432.50.

The accountant also testified on cross-examination by former Mayor William A. Magee, of Pittsburgh, counsel for the receiver of the corporation, that certain items properly charged to operating expenses were added to the capital of the firm.

TELLS OF DEALS

C. C. Nuss, of Washington, Pa., oil operator and now president of the Duquesne corporation, testified as to purchases of oil lands made by the Furlaud company from him as an individual through the Kingston corporation. After a series of conferences, he said he and Victor D. Behm, of Waynesburg, agreed to sell to the Kingston company certain oil lands in the Pittsburgh district. The Kingston company was allegedly controlled by the Furlaud firm.

The sales agreements were affected with Daniel Reuter, of the Furlaud corporation, and then assigned to the Kingston corporation. The property, however, was turned over directly to the Duquesne corporation, Nuss said. He received $670,000 for his property, according to testimony.

Later, he told the commission, he and Behm were elected vice presidents of the company without their knowledge.

MRS. AUGUSTA MORAN MOORE . . . 8½ YEARS FOR A DEGREE

Mrs. Moore, 7357 Kelly street, American Bridge Company private secretary, given her degree after 8½ years of night study.

Degree Winners at Pitt Graduate by Mail

Instead of the usual hustle and bustle of trying on caps and gowns and practicing a dignified tread with a mortar-board on the head for the mid-semester graduation exercises, students at the University of Pittsburgh are going about the business of living as if they had not just completed requirements for degrees.

The 167 candidates for degrees this month will be graduated by letter from Chancellor John G. Bowman. Successful candidates will be invited to take part in the formal graduation exercises at June commencement which will be held for the first time in the Stadium. Seven students applied for doctor's degrees this month, 108 for bachelor's and 31 for master's degrees, officials say.

Joseph Harsky, 36, of 1022 Blackadore street, instructor in physical education at Westinghouse High School receives a masters degree in physical education. He is a former lieutenant in the Russian Imperial Army. His thesis was on the development of physical education in Soviet Russia. He said:

"Physical education in Russian schools is a nation-wide movement, with stress on participation of the masses. Large group competitions rather than individual strivings for records differentiate their system from ours. Their methods are militarized, as opposed to the play and game idea of America."

Mrs. Augusta Moore, of 7357 Kelly street, Homewood, private secretary to Arthur L. Davis, vice president of the American Bridge Company, receives her bachelor of arts degree this February.

HARRIS SEEKING RE-ELECTION TO SENATE

State Legislator Declares Against Unfair Utilities, Urges Aid for Jobless

Senator Frank J. Harris today announced as a candidate for re-election to the State Senate from the Forty-fifth Senatorial District, comprising territory south of the Monongahela and Ohio rivers. In his announcement Harris cited his record in the Senate as deserving support of the voters of his district.

Senator Harris declared:

"There are undoubtedly utility companies which have exacted unfair rates. For such the full force of legislative remedies should be applied."

In his announcement, Senator Harris pointed out that in four sessions of the Legislature he had not missed a single day's attendance.

Mr. Harris

Pledging continuance of his independence and citing his record as his platform, Senator Harris said in part:

"I have served for six years in the Senate, following the death of my brother, who preceded me in office, in which time I have brought to final enactment into law some of the highly constructive and remedial legislation which he proposed. During this time I also have originated various legislative measures which were suggested by my recognition and sincere study of public needs.

PRESENTED NEW BILLS

"I personally presented proposed new statutes which are unquestionably for the public good, but like nearly all legislation which has real merit, these have met with strenuous opposition. Some of this legislation after a sometimes bitter and relentless struggle, has been enacted into law, but other bills, although they commended themselves to right-thinking people and were passed, were so emasculated in committee that the laws as they were enacted did not reflect the original idea at all, nor accomplish the laudable purpose which inspired them. Still others never got out of committee. Therefore, I feel that I still have this uncompleted work to finish.

LEGISLATURE FAILED

"If the present economic condition continues and no special session is called in the meantime, then there is a very plain and definite duty upon every member of the Legislature. And I say now as I said during the last special session, that the Legislature failed to do its duty in the greatest crisis of our day. This is an added reason why I would like to return to Harrisburg as a member of the Legislature that will enact into law whatever wholesome man-saving, job-creating legislation will assist in meeting this emergency in which untold human misery is involved.

FIGHTS UNFAIR RATES

"A paramount issue in the coming campaign will be that which involves the relations of the public utilities to the well-being of our people.

"Where there are public utilities which are exacting exorbitant rates or imposing conditions that are onerous, the Legislature should not hesitate to correct such evils by legislation.

"The legislator, however, should be equally zealous in protecting any public utilities which deal fairly with those who pay for the service rendered."

Firm Here Sues U. S. Over $84,000 Taxes

GIRL FELLED BY ROBBER

Alice Lower, 15, of 1220 Arch street, struck on the head by a robber when she refused to yield her empty purse near her home last night, was recovering in her home today. She was treated at Allegheny General Hospital for a laceration of the scalp.

Police said the girl, accompanied by Eugene Kover, 15, of 316 West North avenue, was walking up the Arch street steps when they were stopped by a man with a revolver.

He took a wrist watch from the girl and an empty wallet from the boy, and then ordered the girl to hand him her purse, which was empty. She refused, saying it was her mother's purse, and the man struck her with his gun and fled.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Appropriations were just flying every which way yesterday here in Congress, but I couldn't seem to get my hands on any of it. Heard Borah in the Senate make what the press boys all said was one of his best speeches. Visited my old friend Speaker Garner. Even all the Republicans say he is doing a great job with his handling of this Congress. Had long chat with Mrs. Longworth, who still knows what all the shooting is about. Heard 'em approve Ogden Mills in the Senate as our new Secretary of the Treasury. Everybody is very high in their praise of his ability and he went through without a murmur.

PLAN TO SOUND SENTIMENT SUSPECTED

Butler Prosecutor Probing Reported Canvass; Assures Fair and Impartial Trial

BUTLER, Pa., Feb. 11.—A mysterious woman was sought by authorities in Butler County today.

She is reported to have interviewed a number of persons whose names are said to appear on a secret panel of prospective jurors drawn for the trial of Pittsburgh's Mayor Charles H. Kline, and his former director of supplies, Bertram Succop. Lawrence Thompson, custodian of the jury list, has steadfastly refused to make it public for over two weeks.

INQUIRY ORDERED

Word of the mysterious woman's activities has reached the ears of Butler County's District Attorney, Edgar H. Negley, who yesterday instructed County Detective Hardy Hepler to make an investigation. District Attorney Negley, upon hearing of the woman's alleged activities, declared:

"I have assured District Attorney Andrew T. Park, of Allegheny County, that I shall use every resource of this office to guarantee a fair, impartial trial. I have determined also that it is my duty to protect the name of Butler County and to guard against any attempt to besmirch the unstained reputation of our community.

"It has come to my attention that someone—a woman—is at work here. She is said to be canvassing the panel from which will be selected the jury which will hear the Kline case.

"I have ordered an investigation."

LIST WITHHELD

District Attorney Negley said he was handicapped in his investigation by Sheriff Thompson's action in withholding the jury list, usually posted immediately after it is drawn. Sheriff Thompson said he was withholding the list to prevent confusion on the part of prospective jurors reporting for service.

He said two panels had been called for the February term of civil court and another panel for grand jury service the first week of March. He indicated he might make public the list for the Kline trial next week.

Two Butler County attorneys have been retained as associate counsel in the defense of Kline and Succop. They are former Judge Robert Galbreath and Attorney Zeno Henninger. Both denied knowledge of the jury list for March 14.

DENIAL BY PRICHARD

Attorney Charles B. Prichard, of Mayor Kline's counsel, today made this comment on the report of the woman's activities:

"There is absolutely no woman of that description connected with our case. We have employed no woman or man to investigate jurors or sound out sentiment. We never have seen a panel and so far as we know the panel is not to be published for the present. That was published in the newspapers and that is all we know. It is inconsistent to say a woman is canvassing the panel when the sheriff is withholding it."

And from Allegheny County District Attorney Andrew T. Park came this:

"I have absolute confidence in Mr. Negley and his integrity and ability, and in his desire that all defendants coming into his court will receive a fair and impartial trial. This matter is entirely within his hands."

City Will Pay for Return Of 'Unknown' Man's Body

City Council has agreed to reimburse Miss Jennie Graham, 1223 Success street, North Side, for expenses incurred in returning the body of her brother, Samuel Graham, 37, from Philadelphia, shipped to the State Anatomical Board after it remained unclaimed at Mayview.

Charging negligence of Mayview officials, Miss Graham informed Council she had not been notified of her brother's death following his arrest at Liberty and Third avenues, January 9.

Dr. John N. Frederick, who examined Graham at Central Police Station, told Council yesterday the victim was an alcohol case, according to his diagnosis, and could not answer questions coherently and had no identification marks.

When Graham died, at Mayview, two days later the body was unclaimed for more than 36 hours, according to Mrs. Enoch Rauh, Director of the City Department of Welfare, and was then sent to the Anatomical Board at Philadelphia.

Miss Graham said she learned of the death more than a week later and spent $42 to bring the body back for burial.

Grayce McCulley, William Cullen and Mary D. Johnston, all alleged members of the Considine gang, were named in the informations as the persons who sold the stolen goods to the Gordon women.

The arrests occurred following a tip from Philip Moran, another alleged member of the gang. Considine and members of the gang were arrested several months ago in connection with scores of robberies throughout the city.

War Is Being Robbed of a Lot Of Its 'Romance'

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Now we're back again in Geneva listening to the peacifiers directing international affairs by remote control.

The diplomats want to do away with the horrors of warfare, including second lieutenants and army underwear.

France, England and Germany agree to discard big tanks. The smaller ones are faster anyway.

There will be no more poison gas. The gin-fizzolas and the aromatic-geerokas will come to grips and breathe on each other.

Those deadly spurs are also ruled or the turf. They scratch the desks in the war office.

You cannot drop a meat ball in your soup. That violates the treaty on depth bombs.

No more bacteriological strafing. That means raising a young germ to hate the enemy. From now on, the cooties must be neutral.

All of which will make war unattractive by robbing it of its picturesque romance and hallowed glory.

Every Father With a Son Who Smokes

Should Know This Unique, Scientific Finding

How By Doing One Simple Thing, You Can Minimize the After-Effects of Tobacco to a Marked and Amazing Degree—WHAT YOU DO

Every day, the average person who smokes too many cigarettes a day notices it. Head heavy and dull—a pressing down over the eyes; across the back of the head.

Scientists now call it "Smoker's Fag." And most people who smoke have it more or less. Few call it by its right name; usually they think it's general bad health.

Now science points a way out. A way that minimizes the after-effects of tobacco to a marked and amazing extent.

How? By keeping your system alkaline. It's excess acid in your system that makes tobacco intolerable. Keep your alkaline balance in the simple way explained here, and you minimize any after-effects from smoking. Feel fine all the time. Believe it or not; but try it.

JUST DO THIS: Simply take two teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a glass of water EVERY NIGHT before bed. That's all.

Or take two Phillips' Milk of Magnesia tablets every night which give an equivalent amount of Milk of Magnesia; for each Phillips' Milk of Magnesia tablet equals one teaspoonful of the liquid Milk of Magnesia.

This small, daily dose of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia tends to neutralize excess acids in your system. To alkalinize your system against the after-effects of tobacco. Your head stays clear; your mouth sweet; you have fewer headaches.

If you smoke, be fair to yourself and try this. Don't let tobacco "get" you. Fortify your system against its after-effects. Millions are learning this. Millions are doing it.

Milk of Magnesia

TWO FORMS NOW AT STORES

You can now get genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in tablet form, as well as ordinary liquid form. Each tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Milk of Magnesia. Carry the tablets with you wherever you go. They taste like mint candy.

RELIEF WORK IN TOWNSHIPS NEAR END

School Pupils Lack Food, Shoes; Welfare Fund Faces Big Task

A number of school children are staying home because of lack of shoes and 1,500 families are obtaining relief amounting to slow starvation in Tarentum, Brackenridge, Natrona and East Deer Township, according in Principals Robert R. Anderson, of Brackenridge schools, and J. E. Clark, of East Deer Township schools.

The two, prominent workers in the Allegheny Valley Emergency Relief Association, serving the district, admitted today the association will have collapsed by April 1, at the latest.

CRISIS FACED

The load will then fall on Welfare Fund organizations and the Allegheny County Emergency Association, themselves faced with collapse. It will cost $376,110 to care for the valley needs adequately, it is estimated.

Clark estimated 10 or 12 children are staying home for lack of shoes in his district. Anderson, 14 or 15 in Brackenridge. Clark said:

"Our donations are so small it's a slow starvation process; everyone gets something but none get enough."

The Welfare Fund and the Emergency Association, it is understood, have avoided entering the district until asked by the local organization. The Welfare Fund yesterday began taking East Deer Township families onto its already over-burdened list.

7 NEW PROJECTS

Meanwhile, additional improvement projects involving expenditure of $129,000 in Pittsburgh and six boroughs and townships were announced today by Frank R. Phillips, chairman of the operating committee of the Allegheny County Emergency Association.

With this announcement, Phillips said, 12,690 men and women have been given work by the association since November 1. Now employed are 9,618 persons.

Elizabeth township, Port Vue, Crafton, Wilkinsburg, Braddock township and Frazier township will share in the work.

Miss Isabel Kennedy, of the Federation of Social Agencies, said today that she will open the first Community Council in the Manchester Community House, tomorrow. Lawrenceville, South Side and Hill districts will follow.

Taxi Man Acquitted In Death of Child

Charles Ross, a taxicab driver, is free today of an involuntary manslaughter charge, Judge Samuel H. Gardner having directed his acquittal in Criminal Court, when the state failed to prove he had been either negligent or reckless. Ross was tried in connection with the death of Victor Michalski, of 925 Warrington avenue, whose skull was fractured by a taxi in front of 925 St. Martin street, July 30.

SPANN SEEKING RE-ELECTION

Representative Max J. Spann, of the Fourteenth Ward, today announced his candidacy for re-election to the Legislature from the Fifth District.

Spann cited the important committees to which he had been assigned in his first term, and pointed out that he had introduced bills for a uniform poll tax, to require notice of an increase in assessments, to permit submission of constitutional amendments oftener than once in five years, as well as many other measures which he said were in the public interest. He was active in the effort to repeal the blue laws and in the special session introduced a bill to permit Sunday amusements, setting a high tax to provide revenue for the relief of unemployment.

6 AUTOS SAVED IN GARAGE FIRE

Six automobiles were moved to safety when an early morning fire today damaged the two-story garage in the rear of the rooming house of Mrs. J. J. O'Brien, 5220 Ellsworth avenue.

The cause of the fire was not learned. Firemen moved the machines into the street and confined the blaze to the interior of the building. Damage was slight.

Man Seriously Hurt When Hit by Trolley

Joseph McTague, 50, address unknown, was in a serious condition in St. Joseph's Hospital today with a possible fracture of the skull after having been struck by a Carson street car at Carson and South Twenty-fifth streets.

Many Girls Mistake Ordinary Restlessness for Love

Does there come a time in every wife's life when she falls" for another man—no matter how fine her own husband may be?

Or is it just "badness" that makes the face of another man haunt Rose's dreams, that makes her thrill and feel all trembly inside when he speaks to her?

And is she alone in her trouble and turmoil . . . or has it maybe hit you, too?

"My dear Miss Martin:

"I'm sunk . . . absolutely sunk . . . and I'm writing to you because you've had wide experience to ask if I'm alone in being like this or if perhaps there are thousands of other young wives in the same jam.

YEARNS FOR OTHER MAN

"Does there come a time in every married woman's life when she falls in love with another man, regardless of how straight and decent her husband is?

"I am one of nature's rock-sure young fools who married at 19 in spite of advice not to. My husband is a very fine young man and the predicament I'm in is none of his making.

"He does not make money enough to take care of us, so I work. Also I have a dependent mother. I love him very dearly, but if this other man had ever said 'come' I am afraid I would do it. His every word haunts me. I can't sleep for thinking of him. I can close my eyes and see him smile. In fact, I am mad about him. The days that I don't see him are dark and unutterably long. Is this love, or is it just damfoolishness? Am I just bad?

"I suppose I'm a darn fool, but what I want to know is, am I alone in feeling this way? Or is this just a natural attitude? Does every woman go through it? Please help me, I am so miserable! ROSE."

RESTLESSNESS

Are you alone, my dear?

No. You're not. There comes a time in every life when it longs for new, fresh adventure—a new trail—

And that really is all this "love" of yours is, Rose. The first flush of newness and sparkle has worn off your marriage. That husband of yours is no longer a mystery . . . and the new man is. But this new man would cease to be an adventure too, if you went to him just as every husband does.

Then what would you have? The same old story of restlessness all over again.

For restfulness is our natural savage heritage that has come down to us from the days when our ancestors wandered from one cave to another, reaching out for new scenes. And there's nothing wrong in restlessness in itself. We owe all our progress to it, all our civilization. And you personally will never lead a full or a helpful life unless it is also a restless life.

But restlessness must be guided and controlled or it will destroy us. And if you don't give it a healthy goal it will seek an unhealthy one. As it is now doing in your case.

You want something new . . . something different . . . and you should have it. But, since you haven't supplied your spirit with a safe answer to this restlessness it is reaching out toward this dangerous answer of Another Man.

NEEDS NEW INTERESTS

Don't make the mistake of your life by calling it Love, Rose. Recognize it for just what it is . . . restlessness . . . and look about for some new, healthy interest that will give your life the variety it needs. You didn't play enough as a youngster, because you married too young. Play now and make your husband play with you. Take up some interesting new study. Join a club. Buy a battered flivver and build yourselves a gypsy van for this next summer. Do something—anything—to find that new and necessary and right adventure.

Then will you forget this man? Yes, you will. For a little while the old glamour will persist—but gradually your discontented spirit will begin to quiet; you'll find that other interests are warming and coloring your life . . . and you'll thank your stars that you didn't wreck your life for a will o' the wisp as many another poor, bewildered woman has done.

Wrong to Think of Talents Only in Terms of Financial Success—Fay King

WELL - THINK OF THE FUN YOU'D HAVING WRITING IT!
I DO THINK I COULD WRITE A STORY, BUT WHATS THE USE, I'D NEVER BE ABLE TO SELL IT!
I JUST SING FOR THE FOLKS AND MY OWN PLEASURE
FAY KING

By FAY KING

So many persons have a slight talent for singing or music, or writing poetry or painting, but because they know their gifts are not great enough to achieve fame by them they neglect them altogether.

It is wrong to think of talents only in terms of financial success.

Their attitude is that as they cannot hope to be the best why bother at all?

They do not consider the pleasure and benefit derived from improving even the least talent.

That it brings happiness and delight that nothing else can, and if you yourself cannot attain to the heights of your appreciation you can at least accomplish something in which you will take pride.

The effort alone will make you somewhat akin to great!

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

Madge Dares to Criticize Veritzen

There was something in Philip Veritzen's voice as he asked me what I thought of Avis Arlen, which aroused every bit of combativeness in me. Perhaps I imagined it, but it seemed to me there was a certain smugness about the question as if he were immensely complacent about something. All the suspicion aroused by the open pursuit of Noel by Avis Arlen and the evident approval of her conduct by her mother and Philip Veritzen rushed back upon me. Was Noel's father trying to kill the spirit of the solemn pact he had with me not to interfere with his son's betrothal with Dicky's niece, while pretending to keep the letter of the contract? I resolved to seize the opening he had given me and bring him out into the open if possible.

"What do you mean?" As a wife for Noel?" I asked coolly.

I had startled him. I realized that, with a malicious little thrill.

He stared at me with his eyebrows slightly lifted, and then he was guilty of the banal question that I have often used, but which I would never expect from Philip Veritzen.

"What do you mean?"

"Just that," I said, and I gave an emphatic little nod, trying to appear as much like what Lil calls a "feminine nit-wit" as possible.

"You surely have seen how determined in pursuit of your son the young woman is."

Mr. Veritzen's eyebrows drew together portentously.

"Is that what you think of my little friend?" he asked. "That she is what our mid-Victorian friends would call a designing woman?"

His voice was playful, but there was that in it which told me that my criticism of his dead friend's daughter had displeased him.

"What do you call her?" I asked saucily.

"A sweet, naive child—an unconscious little flirt, it is true, but who likes Noel immensely and is frank and childlike enough to show her liking without caring about the opinion of other people."

I had hard work to repress a grin at his fatuity. Why was it, I wondered, that men of Philip Veritzen's mentality and shrewdness in judging human nature were always blind to the wiles of girls of Avis Arlen's type, part moron and part shrewd woman of the world?

"I am not disputing that," I said, "but—is the young woman in ignorance of the betrothal of Noel and Mary?"

He eyed me warily.

"I do not know what Noel has told her," he said. "He doesn't confide his affairs of the heart to me, but I do not see why the fact should particularly concern Miss Arlen. A betrothal is not a marriage, you know."

I lifted my eyes and looked at his steadily.

"Does that mean," I asked, "that you have repented of the solemn pact you made with me about Noel and Mary during last Christmas time?"

For a moment, there was a flaming something in Philip Veritzen's eyes as he bent them upon me.

"It takes two to make a pact and two to keep it," he said quickly.

Then he stopped short and looked at me oddly.

"Forgive me," he said quickly, "I should not have said that."

My face felt as if it had been standing over a hot stove, baking griddle cakes. I knew that my cheeks must be an ugly brick red, for I suddenly had realized the meaning of both his impetuous speech and his apology.

Stripped of all disguise, his words could mean but one thing. When he had promised me that he would sanction the betrothal of Noel and Mary, he had expected in return that I would listen to and accept his protestations of love for me. In his opinion, I had not fulfilled my part of the pact, and he felt under no obligation to keep his.

But he had apologized! Did that mean he was big enough to forget that he had expected a reward from me which I could not give him, and would keep his part of the bargain? Or was it simply an empty, courteous gesture and had he reserved the right to do everything in his power to separate Noel from Mary short of openly flouting their betrothal?

Again I moved into the open.

"Will you forgive me if I ask you why you are trying to substitute Avis Arlen for Mary in Noel's life?"

In all his life, I think he never was nearer a violent explosion of anger, something abhorrent to his poised mentality, his controlled emotions. His body stiffened, his hands tightened upon the arms of his chair, and his eyes—I had the sensation of looking at white-hot metal. But when at last he answered me, his voice was cold and controlled.

"You certainly have courage, milady," he said. "I do not think anyone else in the world would have dared to ask me such a question. I would not forgive it in anyone else, but—but you are privileged."

"It concerns me, too, nearly—Mary is very dear to me—or I should never have ventured to put it—or repeat it."

I emphasized the last words and looked at him with apparently calm expectation of an answer, although it took a distinct effort to keep my voice from shaking. No one knew better than I the risk I ran in thus offending the great producer by calling him to account for his conduct.

Household Hints -:-

When sending basted articles to the hemstitchers mark the lines to be stitched with a decidedly contrasting color so that no places will be missed. Silk bastings will pull out much more easily than those done in cotton.

If the buttonholes on the children's play dresses become pulled or frayed, make a bound buttonhole right over the unsightly one, using plain white cambric if no contrasting color is available.

Be sure to thoroughly dry the iron pot roaster or frying pan before putting it away. It will rust very quickly if a trace of water is in it. Light a gas burner for a few minutes, long enough to dry it out.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Diseased Tonsils May Retard Growing Child

There are many factors that determine the health of the growing child. To have normal growth there must be no nasal obstruction and no seat of infection in the throat.

Dr. Copeland

Many times the general health is below par and there is failure to gain in strength and weight. Often these conditions have their origin in the presence of adenoids and diseased tonsils.

Adenoids are small masses found in the upper and back part of the throat. In infancy they are soft and spongy, but as the child grows older they become quite firm and hardened.

Many children have adenoids that cause no symptoms. But where the tissue is present in large amount, there is nasal obstruction. This makes it necessary to breathe through the mouth.

The stupid expression and the mental dullness present in a case of adenoids are characteristic. Head colds are frequent and chronic nasal catarrh, complicated by deafness, is far from uncommon.

Often the nights are sleepless. The repose is broken by bad dreams and night terrors. There is difficulty in breathing. Some children suffer from signs of nervousness. Persistent hoarseness, lasting for months and bronchial asthma have been traced to the nasal obstruction.

The treatment is surgical. When adenoids are accompanied by urgent symptoms, their removal is imperative. This should be done even at an early age.

Diseased tonsils have been blamed for a large amount of ill health, especially in young children. The seriousness of tonsil disease is not dependent upon the degree of the enlargement. Very greatly swollen tonsils may be comparatively harmless. Their only danger is their obstruction to normal breathing. On the other hand, small, deeply embedded tonsils may be badly infected. They flood the system with germ products which are destructive to health and life.

An attack of acute tonsilitis is ushered in by a chill and a rise of temperature. There is pain in the throat and considerable difficulty in swallowing. The throat is reddened and sometimes the tonsils are covered by a film difficult for a layman to distinguish from that caused by diphtheria.

A laxative, rest in bed and a light diet may relieve the condition in a few days. But should further attacks occur or symptoms of disturbance in distant organs develop, it is wise to seek the advice of a physician.

This is imperative because Bright's disease, organic heart disease, rheumatism, St. Vitus' dance, even blood poisoning, have been found to originate in a small, deeply embedded tonsil. Indeed it may be so small that to all appearances it may seem quite blameless for the undermining of the general health.

It must not be overlooked that the germs of tuberculosis often find an entrance to the body through a diseased tonsil. In short, you cannot afford to disregard disease of these organs.

Efforts to treat an infected tonsil by medicine have been unsuccessful. Even the use of electricity is uncertain, although the new "diathermy" treatment is highly regarded by able physicians.

An operation on the tonsil should be done only by a competent surgeon. He will skillfully and completely remove the diseased structure.

For the sake of the fingernails, rubber gloves should be worn by the housewife when she digs out dusty shelves or gives the gas range an overhauling.

If a few grey hairs show up in the eyebrows, as sometimes happens when birthdays have accumulated, get a box of dark brown mascara. Dip the brush in water, pass over the cake of coloring agent; apply lightly. As mascara is only a temporary dye, it must be applied daily.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food don't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul; skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Eight Remain From 1915. Testing of Dawson.

AS FAR AS the regular players are concerned, Rabbit Maranville has outlived the membership of two entire major leagues. The 39-year old marvel, who is right up in the front line trenches every season with just as much pep as he was spilling when he was a green rookie breaking into the big show two decades ago, is the only survivor of all the crop of regulars that held forth at the time of his arrival in the main tent in the fall of 1912 from New Bedford in the old New England League.

Rabbit Maranville

Two others still on the big league rolls came up in the same year, but both are pitchers. They are Herb Pennock, of the Yankees, and Eppa Rixey, of the Reds. One other, Urban Faber, also a flinger, received a couple of tryouts before that time, but did not last and it was not until two seasons later that he returned to stay. Jack Quinn crashed in as early as 1909 but went back to the minors twice. All the rest who antedated or started out with Maranville, have left the majors, or have fallen back to inactive roles as managers or coaches.

BUT THE RABBIT has carried steadily on, except for part of the 1927 season, which he spent with the Rochester Internationals, and though the oldest regular in either of the top loops he is slated for daily duty again in 1932 in the lineup of the Braves, Manager Bill McKechnie planning to use him at second base in event that Bill Urbanski makes good at shortstop.

The player most closely approaching Maranville in term of service as a regular is three years behind him. That player is Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Cubs, who made his big league debut in 1915. Babe Ruth entered in 1914 but did not start to play regularly until 1920. Hornsby, if the condition of his legs and feet permits him to play at all this year, will not be in there steadily, so that the Rabbit may not only be the lone surviving regular of 1912 but the last one remaining from as late as 1915.

SPEAKING OF 1915, how many of the big-show players of that season would you say off hand are still in the National and American circuits? There are only eight survivors all told, four in each league, out of a total of close to 500. The passing of 16 pennant campaigns has brought almost a complete new playing picture.

And of the eight who remain, only two, as stated above, have been playing regularly. The six others were pitchers in that year, and all of them except Ruth have continued as pitchers ever since.

THE OUTSTANDING MAN among the eight survivors is, of course, Ruth, who came up as a pitcher in 1914 and still is baseball's best drawing card and highest-salaried player. The others, in addition to Maranville and Hornsby, are Jack Quinn, who, though not in the National or American in 1915, was a major leaguer with the Baltimore Feds; Eppa Rixey, who broke in during 1912; Herb Pennock, who also started in 1912; Urban Faber, tried by the Pirates as early as 1910, but not becoming a major league fixture until 1914, and Sad Sam Jones, who started in 1914.

Gene Venzke

THE LONGER RUNNING experts ponder over the feat of Gene Venzke last Saturday night in turning in the fastest mile ever run in the United States and the third fastest ever run anywhere in the world, 4:11 1-5, the more hopeful they feel that the Pottstown High School student will turn in a victory for America in the 1,500 meters in the Olympics.

This event has not been captured by an American runner for 24 years. Lightbody won it in 1904 and 1906, and Sheppard in 1908, but in 1912 victory went to Jackson, of Great Britain; in 1920 to Hill, of Great Britain; in 1924, to Nurmi, of Finland, and in 1928, to Larva, of Finland.

VENZKE WILL BE seen in action at least three times more before the arrival of the outdoor season, as he is to run in the mile events at the K. of C., New York A. C. and national indoor A. A. U. championship meets in New York.

Gene has another ambition besides that of beating the world record for a mile. He wants to go to college and make something of himself, he says—Yale preferred, if he can get in.

THE HUNGRIEST TRACK fans will have no cause to complain of unsatisfied appetites at the conclusion of West Virginia University's fourth annual indoor games in the Mountaineer gym at Morgantown Saturday, as the program is so arranged that there will be running events on the track almost continuously during the afternoon and evening. The trials in all events will be held in the afternoon, starting at 2:30 o'clock, with the finals in the evening. The races will be run on a cinder track, 10 laps to the mile, with well-banked curves. Starting blocks will be used.

THE PIRATES CAN'T lose in the release of Pitcher Joe Dawson to Kansas City, under option. A season there will serve to show whether or not Joe can come back sufficiently to be fit for fast company, and if he does make the grade the Bucs can repurchase him.

Dawson, 34 next month, has been out of organized ball since June 8, 1929, when Pittsburgh sold him to Baltimore and he refused to report. His last pitching for the Pirates was done on May 31 of that year, when he worked in a relief role against the Phillies. This isn't his first engagement with Kansas City, as he formerly served three years with that club.

ARGUMENTS AS TO the relative merits of American and European speed skating styles were revived by the recent Olympic ice tests at Lake Placid. This country uses the competitive style, that is actual races. In Europe it's all a matter of time. The entrants skate singly over the course and the decision goes to the one making the best mark on the watch.

But while each side has pointed out the disadvantages of the system used by the other, no one until now has advanced a solution. It has remained for Jack Shea, America's victor in the 500 and 1,500-meter races, to offer a solution that is simplicity itself.

Jack Shea

SHEA WOULD COMBINE the best features of both systems by having every race skated in lanes, as is done in track athletics for the footracers. He sees faults in both styles. Under the European system the trials are stretched over a full day, with the result that changing weather conditions may handicap some of the skaters and help others. The American method leaves open the opportunity to jockey for position and the possibility of physical contact at the turns. As Shea has it figured, the introduction of lanes would eliminate jockeying and contact of any sort, with each man out on his own, while there would also be the added advantage and popular appeal of the competitive angle.

NO SUCCESSOR CHOSEN; DAY MAY GET JOB

Bill Amos

In relinquishing his position with the Presidents, Amos also surrendered his place as varsity track coach and freshman basketball tutor, the resignations to become effective with the end of the present academic year in June, when his contract will expire.

In announcing that Amos had resigned from the athletic coaching corps, the college authorities merely stated that the coach had decided that his period of usefulness at his alma mater had apparently ended and that it would be for the best interests of sports at the institution.

Amos admitted that he had been negotiating with a number of colleges regarding a coaching situation, but declined to state whether or not he had been successful in his quest.

With the retirement of Amos, who has been identified with W. & J. athletics either as player or coach for the past eight years, all manner of speculation was advanced as to his probable successor. The name most frequently mentioned in this connection is that of Leroy P. (Hank) Day, athletic director and coach at Washington High School, who is known to have been in frequent recent conference with the athletic authorities. Neither Day nor members of the council would comment on the possibility of Day or any other succeeding Amos. It was revealed that numerous applications for the coaching position have been received.

Following his graduation in 1928, Amos became coach of the W. & J. freshman team. In 1929, with the departure of Kerr to Colgate, Amos and Ray Ride, who had been Kerr's line coach, were made varsity football coaches with joint authority. The dual control system did not work well and Ride transferred to Case School, Cleveland, where he is still located, and Amos was retained alone as coach at the start of the 1930 season.

During his two years as head football coach, Amos produced teams that won 11 games, lost six and tied one. In 1929, when coaching with Ride, his team won five games, lost two and tied one.

Amos also played basketball, and went out for track at W. & J. He has also played baseball on independent teams. His home is in Washington.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: A MONKEY IN A TEASPOON—A tiny monkey (pigmy marmoset), recently exhibited in the London Zoo, is so small that it can be conveniently carried in an ordinary teaspoon. Its tail is three times the length of its body and it weighs less than a pound. THE RAILWAY ENTRANCE TO LANGRES—The fortified city of Langres, Department of Haute Marne, France, is perched upon a promontory rising to a height of 1,550 feet, so precipitous and sheer in the midst of the plain that the railway is unable to make the ascent. The final stage of the journey to Langres is accomplished by means of a cable railway (chemin de fer a cremaillere). During the World War the American Base Hospital No. 53 was stationed at Langres. A GRAVE DIGGER WHO NEVER DUG A GRAVE—Michael Norris has been listed in the City Record of Boston as grave digger at the old Granary Burying Ground. The grounds are the final resting place of such famous people as John Hancock, the parents of Benjamin Franklin, and Paul Revere, while a bronze tablet on the entrance gate commemorates the victims of the Boston Massacre, but no longer are used for burial. Norris, the "grave digger," spends his time grooming the grass plots and caring for the trees.

GAME TONIGHT
Cleveland at Pittsburgh.

By CARL W. SHATTO

War correspondents eager to get first-hand information on tonight's "big push" probably will be in grave error if they show a preference for Shanghai over Duquesne Garden.

Not that the Japs and Chinese aren't doing a pretty good job of fighting; they probably are giving their best, and ordinarily would rate as the feature attraction in this business of warfare. It's just a tough break for the Orientals that it is the Cleveland Indians who are to oppose the Yellow Jackets at the Craig street arena tonight.

The last time the Clevelanders appeared here was on New Years Eve. On that occasion they fought with the local players on the ice and in the penalty box, with local roppers who proposed a truce, and with local fans who regarded themselves as judges in the business. Police protection was provided to assist the visitors in getting safely out of town.

Are you listening, Floyd Gibbons?

BOTH TEAMS EAGER

If any truce has been arranged since that time it isn't generally known. Their season series at present is even at two wins and one tie each, and each is eager to get the jump on the other. Furthermore, it appears that one of tonight's combatants may finish in the cellar. No announcement is necessary regarding Pittsburgh's sentiments in this matter.

One thing that may serve to keep the temperature of the blood of the contestants at slightly below the boiling point is that the Cleveland lineup will smack of Pittsburgh, even as the Pittsburgh lineup will smack of Cleveland.

Abbie Cox is not sufficiently recovered from a recent injury to don pads, and Gordon Baxter, the property of the invaders, will continue to guard the Pittsburgh cage. Stu Dunning, who was obtained from the Tribe in exchange for Milt Halliday, will be making his first start against his former mates on arena ice.

In addition to Halliday, the Indians now have Jess Spring and Mickey McGuire, gentlemen who have seen service here. Bellemer, with Windsor until a few weeks ago, is helping Spring to do the Indians' backfielding.

LINEUP CHANGE

The only change in the Pittsburgh lineup involves Eddie Rodden and Doc Romnes. Since Earl Miller left to join the Toronto National Leaguers, Romnes has been moved into Earl's spot at left wing, and Rodden placed at center to plug the gap left by the shifting of Romnes. Cliff Barton will continue to perform at right wing.

In the last two starts the Indians have downed Detroit and Buffalo, holders of second and first places, respectively, in the International League standings. The Jackets' last two battles resulted in deadlocks with Windsor and London. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh		Cleveland
Bailey	G	Woods
Fraser	D	Burnett
Rose	D	Spring
Arthur	C	Williams
Lowrie	R	Darragh
Dudley	L	Daniels

DETROIT TIES WINDSOR

WINDSOR, Ontario, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—The Detroit Olympics and Windsor Bulldogs, neighbors and bitter rivals in the International Hockey League, struggled through 70 minutes of air-tight hockey to a scoreless tie last night.

The game was not only closely but it was unusually clean. Only five penalties were called, four of them against Detroit players. The lineup:

Windsor		Detroit
Smith	G	Wilson
Gallagher	D	Felsie
Arthur	D	Brookbank
Haynes	C	Hall
Dupuis	R	Morrison
Robinson	L	Quackenbush

Referee—M. J. Rodden.

Summaries—First period, no score. Penalty, Morrison. Second period, no score. Penalty, Brookbank. Extra period, no score. Penalties, Arthur, Overtime period, no score. Penalties, None.

Buccaneers Sell Joe Dawson to Kansas City

Joe Dawson, ineligible Pirate pitcher who recently was reinstated, yesterday was sold under option to the Kansas City club of the American Association.

Dawson was sold to Baltimore in July, 1929. He refused to report to the Orioles and went into the aviation business here instead.

Joe was a headline performer for Louisville of the American Association when the Pirates purchased him.

MRS. L. RILEY NEARS FINAL

Mrs. Riley played brilliantly yesterday to win her second round contest from Lucille Parsons, of West Orange, N. J., by 4 and 2. She established a comfortable advantage at the start and never was seriously threatened.

Miss Gottlieb was carried to the nineteenth green to win over Ella Mae Williams, 14-year-old daughter of Eddie Williams, Cleveland pro. Two long wood shots left the New York girl five feet from the cup on the extra hole, where Miss Williams laid her a stymie, but Miss Gottlieb holed out for a win.

The medalist, Mrs. E. Hoggarth, of Lorain, O., was defeated by Mrs. Joseph Bydoleck, of Buffalo, 8 and 7.

Mrs. Lillian Zech, of Chicago, recent winner of the Miami Beach Bay Shore woman's championship, was pressed to the seventeenth hole before she won, 2 and 1, from Kathryn Braggaw, of West Orange, N. J.

MRS. FOWNES WINS

PINEHURST, N. C., Feb. 11.—Mrs. William C. Fownes, Jr., Pittsburgh, defeated Mrs. John D. Chapman, Greenwich, Conn., 1 up in 39 holes in a major upset in quarter-final play for the St. Valentine's women's championship yesterday.

Mrs. Richard Clemson, Middletown, N. Y., medalist, disposed of Mrs. J. D. Hathaway, Montreal, 6 and 5. Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow, Bryn Mawr, Pa., eliminated Mrs. Frank McMullen, Philadelphia, 7 and 6. Mrs. E. P. Merwin, New York, defeated Mrs. H. W. Kase, Deal, N. J., 4 and 3.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Bob Waddell, Carnegie Tech football coach, takes rank with Chick Meehan, Foster Sanford, Maj. Frank Cavanaugh and others in his field who haven't permitted the vicissitudes of coaching to bar their rapid progress in the business world . . . He has just been appointed general agent in the Pittsburgh territory for a large insurance company . . . He also is president of the local underwriters' association . . . And he will be head coach at Tech again next fall, with Judge Walter P. Steffen retiring a little farther into the background.

K. O. Christner, who boxes Jack Dempsey in a four-round bout in Cleveland's Public Hall tonight, is 37 years old, and Dempsey is 36, making a total of 73 years between them. . . Just a couple of ambitious youngsters trying to get along in the world. . . . While Eddie Kaphan's boxing arena in Addison street is located in a remodeled church, a new arena is being prepared in Cleveland in what once was a brewery.

Dr. L. G. Beinhauer is the gent who conceived the idea of the Trained Seals of the Air Club . . . Gene Tunney, in denying that he plans to try a comeback and questioning the advisability of Jack Dempsey's attempt, says Carnera, Schmeling and Sharkey all would figure to beat the old Man Mauler at this stage . . . With membership on four National A. A. U. committees conferred upon him, it must be admitted that Heine Blum, local A. A. U. registration committee chairman, is a large man, any way you figure him . . . And this doesn't take into consideration his size.

The nationality of the Cleveland Rosenblum-Celtics is Scandinavian, if anyone should ask you. . . And that of the Brooklyn Americans team, which plays the Clevelanders at the Garden tomorrow night, is Brooklynese . . . Which is a bit different from Chinese. . . . The large-lipped Ubangis on exhibition at Motor Square Garden watched the fights there the other night and must have come away with the impression that the men in the ring were savages.—HARRY KECK.

W. P. I. A. L. NEARS ELIMINATION SERIES

PLANS TO BE MADE FEB. 20 AT CONFAB

By JULIUS LEVIN

With the basketball races in the 18 sections of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League rapidly drawing to a close, officials of the organization are taking steps to arrange plans for the annual elimination series, to be staged in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion.

G. W. Cassler, of Coraopolis High School, basketball chairman of the W. P. I. A. L., has set Saturday, February 20, as the date for the gathering of all the sectional winners in the Fort Pitt Hotel to arrange pairings for the tournament.

REQUIRE 17 GAMES

It will require 17 games, provided no ties are recorded, to determine the championship of the W. P. I. A. L. this season. The series will be ushered in on Friday, February 26, three days after the close of the regular season, and the final game will be staged on Tuesday, March 22.

The W. P. I. A. L. champion will be designated as representative of District VII of the P. I. A. A. The winner of this group will advance to the second round of the P. I. A. A. playoffs, having been given a bye in the first round.

The winner of the City League championship will represent District VIII in the P. I. A. A. competition.

The W. P. I. A. L. champion meets the winner of the District VI-District VIII playoffs.

The close of the basketball campaign still finds many of the sectional winners in doubt. New Kensington and Har-Brack are running neck-and-neck for the Section I crown, while Coraopolis is pressing Leetsdale in Section II. The championship of this section may be decided tomorrow when the two teams clash at Leetsdale.

LEADERS TIED

New Castle and Butler are tied in Section III, while Aliquippa and Ambridge are battling for the title in Section IV.

The Section V race finds Charleroi and Monessen still deadlocked. Ford City has the Section VI championship about clinched, while another victory for Homestead will just about clinch the title for Bill Campbell's boys in Section VII.

The Section VIII title rests between Scott, last year's winner, and Ham Hudson's Braddock team.

Mt. Lebanon must eliminate McKees Rocks to sew up the Section IX crown, while Uniontown is just about "in" as champ of Section X.

SWISSVALE COPS

Swissvale has the Section XI title clinched, while Bellevernon is pressing Sewickley Township for the title in Section XII. North Union and Georges are bunched in Section XIII. Burgettstown has a worthy rival in McDonald in Section XIV, while Canonsburg holds a slight lead in Section XV.

Ellsworth and East Pike Run are tied in Section XVI. East Pittsburgh appears to be a certain winner in Section XVII, while the same holds true of Zelienople in Section XVIII.

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Tony Marino vs. Franklin Young, 10 rounds, and Tony Kasmer vs. Matty Oldach, Charley Blazevich vs. Angelo Verrione and Patsy Hennigan vs. Don Frazier, 6 rounds each, McKeesport.

Tony Marino, McKeesport flyweight, meets a speedy foe in the 10-round main bout in McKeesport tonight when he goes against Franklin Young, Detroit Negro. Young dazzled the local fans with his speed when he boxed Willie Davies at Motor Square Garden a few seasons ago. Until recently, he held the Michigan flyweight title.

Franklin Young

Between Rounds

Paul Pirrone, of Cleveland, and Tiger Joe West, local middleweight, have been signed to box the 10-round main bout at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, replacing the canceled Bruno Bass-Frankie Rogers affair. This will be the third meeting of the big fellows. They boxed a 10-round draw at the Meyers Boat last summer and Pirrone recently stopped the Tiger in two rounds in a return match at the Moose Temple. West has been asking for a chance to wipe out this defeat ever since it occurred.

Promoter Eddie Kaplan and Matchmaker Bill Dummer have everything ready for the second show of Kaplan's new arena in Addison street off Center avenue tomorrow night. Tommy Paul, of Buffalo, meets Joey Thomas, local featherweight in the 10-round main bout. Johnny Warner opposes Jackie Wilson in the semi-final. Mickey Solomon and Jimmy Moore, middleweights, are in the second bout and Patsy John and Jimmy Galligan in the opener.

Kaplan has completed the reseating of the Arena seats and announces that 1,200 of them will be available to the public at 75 cents, with reserved seats at $1 and $2.

Long Tom Williams, big Negro heavyweight, who has been around here for a few years, left today for Syracuse, where he hopes to get Jack McCann to-morrow night. He plans to remain there if he makes good.

U. S. Carpentier, managed by Reed Brown, is available for bouts, he'd have the promoters know.

Ray Eberle's next amateur show in Ambridge will be staged Saturday night, February 27.

Cardinals Drop Scottdale Farm

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Feb. 11.—(AP.)—Business men and baseball fans are to meet tomorrow night to determine whether this city is to be represented in the Middle Atlantic League this year. The local franchise was returned yesterday by the St. Louis Cardinals, who had used Scottdale as a "farm."

KERR, FREUND JOIN SEALS' AIR CLUB

Basketball of the past and present, interpretation of the block play, a slap at stalling tactics and other discussion of interest to players and fans by Dave Kerr, former American League star, and J. J. Freund, Jr., featured the weekly Sports Quiz period of the Trained Seals of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph over Station WCAE, the Voice of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, last night.

Kerr, former star and manager of the Cleveland Rosenblums, world champions, was quizzed by Freund, veteran local promoter of the sport, and Freund then answered questions propounded by Harry Keck, sports editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, who was master of ceremonies.

JOIN LIST OF STARS

Kerr and Freund thus qualified as the latest members of the Trained Seals of the Air Club, consisting of men who have participated in these popular weekly sports broadcasts. Cards of membership now are in the mail for Honus Wagner, old Pirate star; George Gibson, manager, and Jewel Ens, former manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates; Bill McKechnie, manager of the Boston Braves; Dr. H. C. Carlson, Pitt basketball coach; Chick Davies, Duquesne University basketball coach; Tory Gregg and Charley Reid, captain and manager, respectively, of the Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets hockey team; Tony Piet, Pirates' second baseman; A. K. (Rosy) Rowswell, humorist; Jess Quatse, Jim MacMurdo, Mike Milligan, Paul Reider, Warren Heller, Ralph Daugherty and Rip Collins, Pitt football stars; Mike Ferrare, captain of last year's Duquesne eleven; Jack Kennard, athletic director of the Keystone A. C.; Jules Beck, matchmaker of the Motor Square Garden Boxing Club; Dr. L. G. Beinhaur, local sports enthusiast; Paul G. Sullivan, secretary of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association; Jack Keough and Herbert McGee, radio announcers; Howard Harpster, former Carnegie Tech football star, now coach at Geneva College, and Sam E. Watters, secretary of the Pirates.

NOTABLES IN TALKS

Other members of the club include Harry Keck, Tom Birks, Vern Swartsfager, Carl W. Shatto, Charles J. Doyle, Julius Levin and Jess Carver, all of the sports staff of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

This galaxy of sports notables has been brought to WCAE fans over a period of a few months, and the idea is yet in its infancy. If you are not a regular listener to the feature, your sports education is not complete.

SWITCH ELEVEN PLAYS CLAN

By TOM BIRKS

In spite of protests and appeals, the Central League championship may be definitely settled Saturday afternoon when Clan Douglas and Union Switch meet in the circuit's feature battle of the season.

According to the present setup, Clan Douglas must defeat the Swissvale aggregation in order to tie Switch in total of points, and also win the protest now pending before the appeals committee of the West Penn Football Association.

Well-posted soccer men feel there is little chance of the Clansmen winning the protest, since the league threw it out. It is on only rare occasions when the governing body reverses a league decision.

Switch, with its team intact, should win Saturday's game. Douglas has been bolstering its lineup during the past few weeks and played a good game against the Rovers, but there was not enough snap to the front line to beat the Brown and Clough defense.

On Sunday fans will see the Morrys and Morgan clashing in the replay of the West Penn semi-final championship series. The fans are hoping for a cold snap, so that fast grounds will identify the best club.

P. Waner to Play In Charity Game

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 11.—(AP.)—Paul Waner, of the Pittsburgh Pirates; Casey Stengel, former New York Giant outfielder; Tiny Chaplin, Giants' pitcher, and others will compete in a baseball game for charity here Sunday.

Stengel, home-run star of a former world series, will manage one team, while Chaplin will lead the other.

VINES TO WED

PASADENA, Cal., Feb. 11.—(AP.)—Engagement of Verle Low to Ellsworth Vines, Jr., her friend of junior college days, but national singles tennis champion to the sport's world, has been announced. The wedding will take place some time in June.

Fans Hope Mrs. Dreyfuss Can Tie Mrs. Britton

The advent of Mrs. Florence W. Dreyfuss, widow of Barney Dreyfuss, into the ranks of baseball clubowners recalls, among other things, a distinctive Pittsburgh incident that revolves around the outstanding woman of baseball circles —Mrs. Helen Schuyler Britton, formerly the owner of the St. Louis Cardinals.

One of the principal actors in a moving drama featuring Barney Dreyfuss and Mrs. Britton was Rogers Hornsby, present manager of the Chicago Cubs, who then was little more than a corn-fed kid of the Texas belt who was destined to become one of the game's greatest hitters.

Hornsby played a silent part in the play which all but ended with The Rajah in a Pittsburgh uniform.

HORNSBY BID RECALLED

Hornsby came into the big show in 1915 from a dust-and-cinder Class D circuit. Jack Miller, once a big Pirate favorite, who long since has departed this life, was a member of the St. Louis team when Hornsby advanced. Miller, a great judge of players, at once saw greatness in Hornsby.

Rogers opened up his brilliant career in 1916, and it was along about this time that Dreyfuss became interested in him.

Barney learned that Mrs. Britton was in a receptive mood regarding an offer for Hornsby, and the Pittsburgh magnate got busy. In due course of time Dreyfuss and Mrs. Britton had reached an agreement—Dreyfuss was to give the Cardinals $40,000 for Hornsby.

Fifteen years ago a sum of that size was staggering when it concerned only one player. Moreover, the St. Louis team was in financial straits and the money stood out like a pardon. According to Dreyfuss, he had the check already written and was ready to close the transaction when the villian entered the plot.

HUGGINS FOILS BUCS

The "bad man" of drama was a lovable little character who was mourned by the whole baseball world when he passed to his reward a few years ago. His name was Miller Huggins, then manager of the St. Louis club.

Mrs. Britton, it seems, had just about concluded her negotiations with Dreyfuss before she let her pilot in on the transaction. Apparently she was running true to the form of many male magnates. In any event, Huggins, though a wee fellow, let out such a squawk that its echoes reverberated up and down the banks of the broad Mississippi. The alarm was sounded just in time to prevent foreclosure—the public was with Huggins and Hornsby stayed in dear old St. Looey.—CHARLES J. DOYLE.

LENORE KIGHT SETS RECORD

Lenore Kight, of Carnegie Library Club, Homestead, established a new A. M. A. A. U. record last night in winning the district 100-yard free style title feature of the Keystone Athletic Club. Her time was 1:05 2-5, bettering the mark of 1:06 1-5, held for 10 years by Eleanor Smith, of Columbus, O. Johanna Gorman, a teammate, was second.

Russell Lindberg, another Homesteader, won the 100-yard senior free style crown for men in :57 2-5, with Herman Addelsberg, Pitt, second, and Robert Renner, Willows, third.

Joseph Schmieler, of Pitt, is champion in the 220-yard breast stroke as a result of his victory in that event. He was clocked at 3:09. Steve Kish, of Carnegie Library, was second, and Mike Brodie, of Kennywood, was third.

The 50-yard free style handicap race was copped by Eddie Barrett in :34 3-5, with John Henderson second and Carl Rhodes third. A banana race, over the same distance, went to Henderson.

PITT BOXERS MEET TEMPLE SATURDAY

GAMES TONIGHT

Salem at Marshall.

There won't be a basketball game at the Stadium Pavilion Saturday night, Dr. H. C. C. Carlson having his Panther cagers at Annapolis on that day, but there will be plenty of action, as Joe Orsini's Pitt mittmen meet the Temple University fighters in a seven-bout meet.

Orsini is out to win this meet, for it would give his fighters better than a 50-50 percentage for the season, as his boxers already have beaten West Virginia and have lost to Syracuse.

CLOSE CONTESTS

Orsini figures he will win two bouts, but the remainder are tossups—in fact, one of those he figures on winning may well be classed in the latter division.

Jack Schricker, the best scrapper on the Pitt squad, who came back in the last round to defeat Latham, of West Virginia, and knocked his Syracuse opponent kicking in the second round with a left hook, is Orsini's pick to win over the veteran Capt. Irving Kutcher, of Temple, who has lost only three out of 17 starts, all of them coming in his first year of competition.

Several fighters on the Pitt squad who appeared to have their jobs cinched are going to find themselves somewhere in rooting section Saturday night, according to plans made public by Orsini today.

Harry Conti, 125-pounder, who won against Fisher, of West Virginia, and lost a close decision to Wertheimer, of Syracuse, intercollegiate champ, is one of the boxers doomed to ride the bench, and Harry Martin and Marius Santicola, each of whom have represented the Panthers in the 135-pound class, will be out of action. In their place will be Willis Schempf, willing, if inexperienced, sophomore.

AT W. VA. TONIGHT

Temple lost its first meet this year to the crack Army boxers by a 5-3 score. The Owls meet West Virginia tonight at Morgantown, and after that a better comparison may be made.

Doctor Carlson, whose cagers are riding the Pullmans again this week, will find the going plenty rough against Georgetown and the Navy. The former recently handed West Virginia a pasting, and the Navy has lost only three contests all year.

Russ Ochsenhirt, varsity center at the beginning of the season, will be back at his old post in the starting lineup when the Panthers and the Hoyas meet Friday. Don McCamant will still be on the bench and Charley Hughes will remain with the first five.

Adrian won the Michigan-Ontario Conference championship last winter.

Marty Reiter, Dukes' star guard, arrived home from New York yesterday. Reiter was taken ill last week while the Dukes were playing in the metropolis, and was forced to remain after his mates came home. He may play Saturday.

GAME POSTPONED

The game between Geneva and Allegheny scheduled tonight at Beaver Falls has been postponed until next week, due to a misunderstanding concerning the date for the battle. Only two other contests are slated, West Virginia meeting the Crescents in New York, and Salem invading Marshall's court.

April 23—Duquesne, away. April 29—Bethany, away. April 30 — A. A. U., away. May 6—Grove City, home. May 9—Carnegie Tech, home. May 7—Bethany, home. May 11—W. & J., home. May 16—Carnegie Tech, away. May 18—Navy, away. May 19—Georgetown, away. May 20—Maryland, away. May 25—Grove City, away.

OKLAHOMA AT W. & J.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 11.—(INS.)—The bill legalizing 15-round heavyweight championship bouts in Illinois, awaited only the signature of Gov. Louis Emmerson today to become law. The bill provides that the state shall receive 15 per cent of the gate receipts of the 15-rounders. Title bouts in other divisions will be limited to 10 rounds, as at present.

DREYFUSSIANS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Regardless of what you may have heard to the contrary, Barney Dreyfuss had a wholesome affection for Rabbit Maranville and Lefty Grimm, two great diamond performers who inherited comic traits of a rich hue. In Dreyfuss' diamond code, however, there was little room for comedy in a championship game, and, while he realized that Rabbit and Lefty were natural comedians, he could not see the wisdom of injecting the funny stuff into the business of fighting for victories. Yet he always smiled whenever Maranville's or Grimm's name was brought into a fanning bee. Off the field the Pittsburgh magnate was very fond of the clownish fellows.

Rabbit and Lefty just about ran Barney out of Wrigley Field during the course of a battle between the Pirates and Cubs. The incident developed at the time when "Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean" was stopping the shows of the vaudeville circuits. The two funny fellows of the Pittsburgh club were among those who sat in on the vaudeville act when it reached Chicago. The appealing and tuneful number made such a hit with the shortstop and first baseman that they sang it to the merriment of their clubmates as they dressed for the game. The snappy offering also was rendered by the two Buccos when they went forth for a practice frolic.

It is hardly necessary to relate to Pittsburgh fans that Rabbit and Lefty could make the ball do plenty of tricks. While they were in the Pirate infield, hundreds of fans went to Forbes Field early to watch their clever fielding stunts before the games. They were in a class by themselves and their practice show was appreciated not only in Pittsburgh, but in the other cities of the league as well.

But to get back to Chicago. Mr. Dreyfuss was in town for the game. The two infielders were putting on the number of the night before as Barney took his seat. He got there in time to see and hear a skit that made the fans roar.

"Will we get him, Mr. Gallagher?"

"Absolutely, Mr. Shean!"

W. VA. BEATEN BY ARMY

WEST POINT, N. Y., Feb. 11.—(AP.)—Army defeated the University of West Virginia, 42 to 26, yesterday. The Cadets led at half time 25 to 18. The Mountaineers' best work was done in the first half, during which period Cubbon, who tied Ray Stecker for high scoring honors, scored five of his six field goals.

FLYNN BEATS CRAVOTTA IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—(AP.)—Eddie Flynn, of New Orleans, who won the National amateur welterweight boxing championship the last time he came to New York, returned to the Madison Square Garden ring last night and outpointed Charles Cravotta, hard-hitting amateur from Uniontown, Pa., in one of the featured bouts of a program for the benefit of the Mayor's unemployment fund.

A crowd of about 8,000 cheered Flynn as he floored his rival in the first round, then "coasted" through the remaining two stanzas to an easy victory. After piling up an early margin, Flynn took things easy and had little more than a workout.

Cravotta was bleeding from a slight cut on the mouth at the end of the bout, while Flynn, who offered a superb defense, was unmarked. Flynn made good use of his left hand, jabbing the Pennsylvania boy off balance and hooking effectively.

Toward the end of the second round, Cravotta rallied and tore into the champion at full tilt. But Flynn cut loose with his right a couple of times and stopped him.

RAIN DELAYS OLYMPICS

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 11.—(AP.)—A heavy downpour of rain this morning, following a sudden rise in temperature, caused postponement of the first two heats of the four-man bob sled competition until tomorrow.

The snow, piled in huge drifts by storms of the last few days, was rapidly melting under the downpour of rain and the outdoor hockey arena and Olympic skating course was turned to slush from glistening ice.

Officials were hopeful the ski jump, only other event on the day's official program, could be held this afternoon as scheduled, but there was little promise even of that with the rain continuing.

The Olympic committee's decision, announced some time after 15 representatives of seven nations had performed, returned to the 20-year-old Norwegian girl the honors she won four years ago at the St. Moritz Olympics, when she swept all opposition before her.

Fritz Burger, Austria, was second. Maribel Vinson, of Boston, was highest among the Americans, being given third place. Constance Wilson Samuel, of Canada, was fourth.

STOCK MARKET MAKES SHARP ADVANCES

Many Leading Issues Show Gains of 3 to 7 Points And Auburn Shoots Up 16

NEW YORK, Feb. 11 (AP.)—The decisive non-partisan effort in Washington to restore the normal functions of banking gave the stock market its most powerful boost in nearly two months today.

While Wall street was not entirely of one mind regarding the proposed revision of Federal Reserve practice most leading bankers seemed heartily in favor of the measure, some expressing the view that it was the most promising of all measures yet undertaken to check deflation.

Virtually the entire stock list swept forward, advances of 3 to 7 points appearing in many prominent issues while Auburn shot up 16. Bears were obviously caught napping. Such issues as American Telephone, Allied Chemical, American Can, American Tobacco "B," Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Consolidated Gas and Case rallied up about 5 to 7 points, while issues up 3 or more included General Electric, Union Carbide, Woolworth, Sears Roebuck, National Biscuit, Westinghouse Electric, Autolite and others. General Motors rose 2. Oils and coppers advanced but moderately.

Added to the Federal Reserve revision measure came the announcement that Ford Motor Company would soon begin active production of its new models, resuming once more its position as a large consumer of materials and supplies. Furthermore, Union Pacific's declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of $2.50, in keeping with yesterday's not widely credited rumor, was also a market stimulant. Lorillard's annual earnings provided a bright spot in corporate news, showing 1931 net of $2.12 a share, as increased from $1.47 in 1930.

While some bankers felt that the proposed Federal Reserve revision was unwisely inflationary, the preponderant opinion seemed to be that inflationary indications were completely lacking, that the measure would only give the Federal Reserve system some of the flexibility of some of the leading and traditionally conservative central banks of Europe. Furthermore, it was felt that the bogey of gold exports would be abolished, since the measure would permit more thorough use of the country's large metal stocks.

Some bankers explained that the measure should so strengthen the nation's banking system that banks throughout the country could again resume normal extensions of credit for commercial and industrial purposes. This they felt, should bolster commodity prices.

GAINS SCORED BY GRAINS

CHICAGO, Feb. 11.—Parallel to upturns in Wall street securities, grain markets scored a brisk early advance today. Credit expansion moves at Washington were a stimulus to active buying of grain future deliveries, wheat especially. Opening ¾-2 higher, wheat afterward held near the initial gains. Corn started ⅝-1¼ up and subsequently rose further.

Contributing upward impetus to wheat values were Liverpool advices telling of good general demand for wheat. Leading exporters of North American wheat were also represented as believing that a big business with overseas countries probably would be experienced for the next three months. Word of a cold wave in North Dakota suggested a dangerous fall of temperatures ahead for domestic winter wheat now largely bare of snow protection and unusually sensitive to damage. Canadian dispatches told of the coldest weather of the year, 28 to 62 below zero.

Forbes

Gibson Has Plan for Making Bank Directors Work

—By B. C. FORBES—

DIRECTORS SHOULD direct. You've often heard that.

Harvey D. Gibson, who has been coming to the front more than any other New York banker who raised more than $18,000,000 for unemployment relief, who greatly pleased the financial world by taking over control of the Manufacturers Trust and who has just absorbed another large bank giving his institution total resources exceeding half a billion dollars, tells me of a novel plan he is to introduce for the purpose of seeing to it that his directors will take an active interest in actually directing.

Mr. Forbes

Instead of the customary monthly meeting his board will meet regularly once a week, thus doing away with a lot of committee meetings.

He is to pay each of his 40 directors $1,200 a year—provided they attend every meeting.

To encourage them to attend, absentees will be docked their fee.

The money withheld from directors who do not attend meetings will be distributed as extra remuneration to the directors who do attend.

SAID MR. GIBSON to me:

"I want working directors. After the regular business has been disposed of at board meetings, half-an-hour will be devoted to going over specific accounts and specific 'prospects.' Certain directors will be allotted certain accounts to go after. At the following meeting, they will report on what they have done.

"Naturally, our 40 directors, all men of importance and influence, have many affiliations and many friendships. Although the 40 touch business at a great many points. By having them actively working to build up accounts, we should be able to develop deposits vigorously."

Mr. Gibson tells me that the old-established Fifth Avenue Bank had a somewhat similar plan for rewarding directors attending meetings. The day of the historic 1888 blizzard was a directors' meeting day. Each director figured that none of the others would brave the terrific storm and that he by attending would pocket the fees of all the others. The extraordinary result was that every director showed up!

In these trying days it is refreshing to find one chief executive—like Harvey Gibson—who is heroically bucking the tide and accomplishing notable results.

HERE IS THE inspiring story of a concern that has been able successfully to overcome conditions, book more business, increase its working force and improve its profits.

Out in Denver, Col., a financial gentleman whose hobby was and is collecting relics of Napoleon, conceived years ago the idea of introducing in this country investment trusts along the lines of British trusts he had carefully studied. His offerings met a most gratifying response.

Thus encouraged, he decided to invade the financial center of the country. Opening a tiny office in New York, he began to operate. There was little competition in those days. Consequently, his pioneering efforts proved fruitful.

The "Coolidge boom" brought a deluge of every conceivable stripe of so-called investment trusts. Some were sponsored by the highest in the financial world, some by the lowest—fly-by-night fakers. The wreckage since the panic has been shocking.

Yet what has been the record of this man from Denver?

Since the 1929 crash he has increased his total force over 50 per cent. Salaries have been increased, not reduced. A Christmas bonus has been paid right along. Two new offices have been opened.

This quiet-spoken banker whose office is a veritable Napoleonic museum is Calvin Bullock, envied by other less successful promoters of investment trusts and respected for the integrity and ability he has consistently exercised.

Bank of England.

LONDON, Feb. 11.—The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows these changes in pounds: Total reserve increased 1,147,000; bullion decreased 9,000; other securities decreased 1,837,000; public deposits increased 1,833,000; other deposits decreased 10,418,000; notes reserve increased 1,147,000; government securities decreased 4,615,000.

The proportion of the bank's reserve to liability is 43.64 per cent, compared with 38.92 last week. Rate of discount 6 per cent.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—An outburst of covering was the curb market's response today to the proposal to expand the rediscount base of the federal reserve system. Stocks which had been harboring a relatively large short interest rallied smartly, especially in the early dealings.

BUSINESS

Gains in Earnings of Steel Companies Seem Remote at This Time.

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

STEEL COMPANY PROFITS for the first quarter of 1932 seem unlikely to record any impressive gains over those of the final quarter of the past year. The last three months of 1931 were the poorest in many years of steel history, and steel men were of the opinion that at least slightly better results could be expected early this year.

As usual, demand for steel increased in January, but improvement in production has come to an abrupt halt, with the leading companies working at about 28 per cent of capacity. This was much better than in December. Had improvement continued, the industry would have been justified in taking a more optimistic view of the future. But the check in production indicates that steel is to go through another period of dull business with no apparent trend either for better or worse.

Weakness in prices developed late last year and efforts to stabilize quotations on steel products have been only partially successful. This makes the chances for better steel earnings remote, since the producers appear to have turned the fruits of wage cuts and economy programs over to consumers instead of using them to bolster earnings.

* * *

Consuming Industries In Dull Condition

THERE HAVE BEEN few times in the past when all types of steel consumers have been working at a low rate and have been showing little interest in buying material. It was generally hoped early this year that the automobile makers would be able to operate at a faster pace and that their requirements for steel would show a corresponding increase. This was based on the fact that most motor car builders are offering substantial improvements in their products.

But the trend of automobile production has not come up to expectations. In fact sales have lagged and curtailments in schedules have been more noticeable than increases.

* * *

Rail Buying Remains In Uncertain State

THE SETTLEMENT of the railroad wage controversy was watched in the hope that it would make a resumption of buying of steel possible. The steam lines have been in no hurry to place orders since traffic has shown few indications of improvement. Some buying of steel rails may take place in the near future, but equipment buying is likely to be delayed until the carriers have definite evidence that a better volume of business is probable in the future.

Building activity also has been light. Structural steel orders have been at the lowest level in many years. Curtailments in municipal, county and state budgets also have had an unfavorable effect on the demand for certain types of steel.

The steel business may get new life in the spring but there has been no evidence of any improvement up to the present time. Following the last meeting of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, it was intimated that no more dividends would be paid unless better business could be found. The present prospects for steel do not seem to be particularly encouraging.

INDUSTRY POST REFUSED BY COOLIDGE

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

SAN SIMEON, Cal., Feb. 11.—Former President Coolidge, I learn, was invited to become head of the proposed American Federation of Industry, which would speak authoritatively for organized productive wealth in the United States.

Though he is reported to have expressed the opinion that the idea behind the movement was as sound as a dollar, Mr. Coolidge, in accordance with his policy of remaining a free lance, declined to accept the post.

Mr. Rukeyser.

A group of leading industrialists and financiers are of the opinion that national welfare has been impaired by the lack of political prestige of the successful business executive. Though besieged by lobbyists, Congress, these men feel, has no place to turn for the authoritative advice of industry on matters pertaining to co-operation between government and industry. President Hoover, it is true, has leaned heavily on business opinion, but he has relied largely on his personal contacts.

The thought was that a voluntary council of the leading men in each of the principal industries be formed to discuss problems of business management in the large. It was suggested that Owen D. Young represent the electrical industry, Alfred P. Sloan Jr. the automobile industry, and Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corporation, the steel industry, and that similar outstanding personalities be selected to represent the other key trades.

The men behind the movement feel that the Chamber of Commerce of the United States has not accomplished the public leadership which such a council of top-notchers could.

LEADERS DISCOURAGED

One of the key movers among the organizers was E. F. Hutton, Wall street broker and chairman of the General Foods Corporation. The refusal of Mr. Coolidge to head the movement has discouraged the organizers somewhat, and no particular progress is being made at the present.

The idea is fraught with excellent promise, and should not be discarded. The public has learned in the present depression the outcome of anarchy in the business world, and is prepared, I think, for reasonable co-operation in the interest of industrial planning and economic co-ordination. Some modernization of the restrictive anti-trust laws are in order, especially if business can organize co-operatively to stabilize economic conditions at a prosperity level.

Europeans Buying Canadian Wheat

OTTAWA, Feb. 11.—The Canadian minister of trade and commerce states a large European demand for Canadian wheat is now making itself felt.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Led by the rails, the bond market today gave indications of renewed interest in higher prices and substantial gains were recorded by various issues.

Most of the United States government loans steadied, although trading in this department was somewhat dull and price changes followed a narrow range.

In the foreign list Japanese obligations were firm, the government 6½s gaining fractionally. Some bonds of Belgium, Colombia, Germany, Italy and Uruguay sold higher. British 5½s were inclined to ease.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—(AP)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column; (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

EMBERS OF LOVE -:- Story of a Pretty Girl in Whom Burned The Flame of a Great Emotion -:- By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER VII.

Her ankle hurt so that she couldn't get up. She sat there on the walk, with it doubled under her, and bit her lip to keep from crying. It hurt so . . . it hurt so . . . and Ken was going away.

He had stopped the car, and was running back to her. "Darling, you've hurt yourself . . . let me see . . . Oh, what shall I do for you, Lily Lou?"

She saw his face, strained and white and terrified in the starlight . . . His face, all tortured, because she was hurt.

Warm tears overflowed her eyes. She reached up her arms, and buried her face on his shoulder. "I was running . . . to call you back, and I fell."

Now that she was started she couldn't stop. . . . Lily Lou, who never cried.

"I didn't want you to go," she sobbed, "so I ran—"

It frightened her a little. She wiped her eyes, managed to say, "I'm sorry for making a fuss. I must go in."

She got to her feet. The ankle didn't hurt so much now. She must have imagined it—it was just a wrench. "It's nothing," she told him—"mostly fright."

"Lily Lou," he said in a serious, almost stern voice, "Do you love me, or don't you? I've got to know. I can't bear it to go on this way. No, don't look away. It isn't fair to me. You've got to tell me. . . . Say no if you must, but say something—"

"And if I say no?" Her voice was still thick with tears. he could hardly understand her, but he realized what she meant.

He drew back a little stiffly, said, still in that curiously stern voice, "Well, if you say no it's all right. Lily Lou. I'll just go on—same as I'd planned to. I won't make a nuisance of myself. Only I've got to know."

ALL FORGOTTEN

"She couldn't say yes, and she couldn't say no . . . . She couldn't bear to lose him.

"Oh, don't go," she pleaded. "Ken—don't go—"

She saw his face, once more triumphant, laughing in the starlight. "Then you do love me—oh, Lily Lou!"

He forgot all about her ankle, her cool aloofness. He pulled her to him, his lips moved over her face, her throat, her neck. Lily Lou lay limp and nerveless in his arms. She too had forgotten the ankle, she had almost but not quite forgotten the stage . . . The stage where she, in scarlet velvet, would be Tosca, in white satin, Marguerite . . . "This is love," she thought. "It's happened to me. . . . I love him, and he loves me, and nothing else matters . . ." The little light of memory in her mind that illuminated the Tosca, the Marguerite she was to be, went out. The stage was in darkness. She was alone in the dim starlight with Ken, and Ken whom she loved.

"Kiss me — again!" she breathed.

And when he did, she whispered, "Oh, Ken, I do love you. I've tried not to, but I can't help it any more—I do! I do!"

She never knew how long they sat there on the porch, their arms entwined, and afterwards she was glad she didn't. But it didn't matter. Nothing mattered. She loved Ken, and Ken loved her.

WHEN IN LOVE

They had 50 hushed, tremulous goodbyes. It must have been near daylight when he got into the car, and she waved from the screen door.

And suddenly her ankle hurt. Oh dreadfully. It hurt so much she couldn't stand on it. Leaning on a chair she crawled through the dark, silent little parlor into the front bedroom, slipped off her clothes, climbed into the big, soft feather bed. From the open window came the smell of the dusty roses, the twitterings of some waking birds. The ecstasy in her heart, the pain in her ankle became one. One unbearingly painful, joyous ache.

"This is the way you feel when you are in love," she thought and cried a little.

When the morning noises in the house didn't wake her, and she didn't come to breakfast, her mother went to her room.

"Lily Lou, sleepy head. You must have stayed out real late. We didn't hear you come in—"

Lily Lou opened heavy eyes. "Oh, kind of late. Oh, mother, I hurt my ankle."

"Hurt it? Lucky if you haven't broken it. Oh, Lily Lou, why didn't you call me? I could have got a hot footbath or arnica—"

She bustled for the remedies now. Lily Lou lay back on the pillows. She was tired, and listless. She didn't want to move. She wanted to capture again the dreams of last night.

But they weren't dreams. It was all true . . . Ken loved her, and she loved him . . .

The ankle didn't respond to home remedies. The doctor came from Lakeport, and said it was a sprain. She'd have to keep off of it for at least another week.

The office was telegraphed. "Maybe I'll lose my job," Lily Lou thought, but it didn't seem important. Oh, well . . . a job.

The office telegraphed back, "Sorry to hear of accident. Take time about returning. Relief operator willing to remain long as necessary."

Her father liked it because she sat with him on the porch now. She was quiet, responsive, dreamy-eyed. He told her old, old stories he had told her dozens of times before. She listened with rapt, wide-eyed attention, not really hearing a word.

Ken wrote to her from the city. Sent her boxes of flowers that arrived slightly wilted, dearer to her because they had to be coaxed back to freshness.

"Mr. Sargent feels terrible because the accident happened when Lily Lou was with him," her mother explained.

Now that Ken was gone, and she hadn't told them about it, Lily Lou thought she had better not mention it for the present. After all, Ken hadn't said anything about being engaged . . . Did he mean that when he said he loved her? She didn't know. . . . Began to fret, to want to get back to town.

The doctor didn't want her to go, but he consented to tape the ankle and let her. The family was sad to lose her again. "I'm always losing my children," her mother said. Dad didn't say anything. His big hand trembled, and he swallowed hard. Lily Lou's heart ached for him. For both of them. She wanted to do something to prove her love, but she didn't know what. She kissed them both. "I hate to leave you," she said, but that wasn't strictly true, since leaving them meant meeting Ken again.

Her mother loaded her down with things to take to May. Two cakes, a big pan of fried chicken all done up in wax paper, and a dozen fresh eggs.

The suitcase weighed so much . . . Lily Lou picked it up awkwardly. "Never mind, you'll be proud of me, some day!" she said, childishly.

Would they be proud of her, if she married Ken?"

"Anyone who says that being in love is a pleasure is crazy," she thought.

Now Go On

ALL IN A DAY — By MARK HELLINGER

THE STORY came to me in the mail and I think it's a pip. Down in Virginia, and in other sections of the nation where tobacco is grown, the farmers have been having a rather tough time of it. Indeed, prices have gone so low that the tobacco farmer is lucky to break even. The same thing, of course, applies to other farm products all over—and the only reason I single out tobacco is because the story is told about such a farmer.

A few days before Christmas a Virginia farmer took a load of tobacco into town and turned it over to the warehouse. His instructions, naturally, were to sell the load at the highest possible prices. And, if they didn't mind, even a little higher.

While waiting for the disposal of his crop he decided to visit a few stores and buy some presents for his family. And why not? He had about $20 in his pocket, and the prospect of collecting a nice revenue from the sale of his tobacco was very bright indeed. So out he went for his family shopping.

For hours he wandered around. This being the Christmas season, he was buying presents that might be useful. He bought a new pipe for the baby, a new radio tube for his wife, a pair of overalls that would fit him for his little boy—and so on. Before he was through he had done for the entire $20. Then he returned to the warehouse.

"Fine," cried the farmer, "Do you want to give me the cash now or would you rather mail me a check?"

The owner shook his head.

"Not so fast," he returned. "You didn't let me finish. At the current price, and with all charges deducted, you now owe me $1!"

"What?" he roared. "You're fooling!"

The other man handed him a bill that held the complete data.

"Read that," he advised.

The farmer did so. There could be no doubt about it. His crop had been sold and he actually still owed the warehouse man one dollar. He swallowed hard and nodded.

"You're right," he muttered, "and I'm sorry to say that I'm in a tough spot. I just spent the afternoon buying some Christmas presents in town and I haven't a penny left in my pocket. If you don't mind, I'll go home—and the next time I come to town I'll bring you a nice fat hen in order to square the transaction. Will that be all right?"

A few days later the farmer walked into the warehouse again. He summoned the owner and turned over two fat hens. It was the owner's turn to be surprised.

"I thought you were only going to give me one hen," he cried. "What's the idea of two?"

The farmer shrugged his shoulders.

IT ALL happened, reports Marc Lachmann, in a suite in one of the better New York hotels. He is a popular movie star of the new school type that has clicked in a big way in the past two years. And here he was, back in town for the first time since he departed for Hollywood.

The regal functions were in order, and the lad was busy entertaining the old pals who had come to congratulate him on his success. Also in the party was a cute little Hollywood beauty who had followed him East and was taking every opportunity to show that she was daffy about him. Far from resenting the situation, the star was just as affectionate with the girl as she was with him.

The door opened, and in walked a young woman with a heavy-set bird who was evidently her husband. The movie star received the couple with sincere handshakes and ordered drinks and food for them at once. But even as he talked to the new couple, his right arm was around the Hollywood cutie and he was interspersing his remarks with tender kisses.

"That's right," he returned. "Why? Anything unusual about it?"

"Well," returned the newspaperman, "just because he's a star doesn't mean that he's permitted to do anything. You'd think he'd toss that blonde in a corner while he's talking to his ex-wife."

The pal smiled.

"He's probably doing it for a reason," he said. "The story is short and sweet. In the days when he was in vaudeville and couldn't get a break, that woman left him flat for the mug she's with. He drives a truck and they live on the outskirts of Brooklyn. You see?"

"I see," said the newspaperman . . .

AS WE SAT around the other night and talked of prison inmates who are sentenced on false raps, someone unfolded a rather unusual and—seemingly—perfectly true story. It seems that Mike, a boy of 17, was employed by a baker in the Bronx. Being the average kid of his age, Mike enjoyed playing little tricks on the proprietor of the bakery shop.

The boss was a sour man with an angry face. He suspected Mike of causing him small annoyances, but he said nothing. After the youth had been with him a year, he suddenly fired him. The kid went over to New Jersey and landed a job with a friend of his.

Another year went by. While walking along in New York one afternoon he saw some toy guns displayed in a window. The thought suddenly struck him that, with one of these, he could have some excellent fun with his old boss, the baker. It would be a long ride to the Bronx, but it would be worth it. After he had scared the sour baker, he would laugh heartily and discuss old times. Wouldn't that be a load of laughs?

So that night, around 9:30 he placed a rag around his face and strolled into the bakery shop. The proprietor was behind the counter.

"Stick 'em up!" growled the kid.

Instead of complying with the request, the boss let out a howl that could have been heard in San Mateo, California. By one of those miracles that so seldom occur, a policeman had just turned the corner. He leaped into the shop and grabbed the boy.

Mike tried to explain. But the baker was very bitter. He said the boy had worked for him in days gone by and had always been a bad youth. So off to the station house went the policeman, the baker and the youth.

If that kid is playing jokes now, he's doing it in jail. They gave him from two to four years . . .

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS -:- Junior Komic Club

The dates of the monthly election of officers of the 17 chapters of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters will be announced at the meetings Saturday. Officers consist of a Grand Jester, who may be a boy or girl, and a Board of Governors, consisting of three boys and three girls.

Mr. C. A. Redstone, of the McKeesport Young Men's Christian Association addressed the Junior Komic Club at the Memorial Theater Saturday. He spoke in glowing terms of the patriotic, educational and entertainment features of the club, then went into a pep talk on the membership drive now in progress at the Memorial.

The stage program was made up of the following boys from the Y. M. C. A.: John Mark, Nick Vidnovic, William Tobias, Bill Surgeon, Dennis Smith, Joe Bortake, John Marks, Paul Bielic, Mike Bazzone, Jimmy Lyses and Joe Grott.

Prizes were awarded to Le-Verne Bentley, James Moonis, Frank Kelley, Sam Gwosden, Lew Paulic and Audrey Thomas.

GRAND, GREENSBURG

Every child attending the meeting at the Grand (Greensburg) Chapter Saturday received a gift of candy. After the usual opening ceremonies, members of the club played musical instruments, danced, sang and gave readings.

Steve Mance gave another exhibition of rope twirling. This has become a popular sport with both boys and girls in Greensburg. Mr. Mance has promised to stage a contest in the near future.

The chief attraction at the Plaza Chapter meeting Saturday was Vero, the magician. The Rowland (Wilkinsburg) Chapter had a similar entertainment given by Rhea. Mr. Rhea, in addition to his tricks, introduced lightning sketches. The Kenyon staged contests and a clever stage show was presented by members of chapter.

Manager Montague, of the New Carnegie Theater, is leaving no stone unturned in building up the interest in his chapter of the Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club.

At next Saturday's meeting a new grand jester will be selected and the members are urged to be on hand to participate in this election.

Mr. English's Plan

The Suggestion That the Cost of a Utilities Fight Be Pro-Rated Among the Municipalities Has Merit.

The outlook for a vigorously prosecuted test of the right of the Duquesne Light Company to charge the present rates for electric service is improved by the statements on the subject made by individual councilmen when interviewed by the Sun-Telegraph.

If the Duquesne Light Company sincerely believes its rates are fair, it should encourage and support the proposed investigation; for it stands to gain in good will by a judicial vindication.

It looks now as if the principal obstacle would be the cost of the proceedings, which City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt roughly estimated would amount to $60,000.

Councilman W. Y. English has offered a meritorious suggestion for meeting this difficulty. Since not Pittsburgh alone but numerous other municipalities would benefit by a rate reduction Mr. English proposes that all co-operate in a suit and share the cost. That would be fair to all and would keep the burden from being too onerous on any.

If collected from all the cities, boroughs and townships that are served by the Duquesne Light Company, $60,000 should not be a prohibitive figure. If the suit were successful the taxpayers would soon be saved many times that amount through a lower charge for electric service.

In view of the attitude that the Public Service Commission has heretofore shown, however, it will not be wise to confine the effort to get lower rates to an appeal to the commission.

Political action, looking towards the election of State Senators and Representatives who will do something to protect the people from exorbitant utilities rates, is also necessary. The excellent work along this line that is now being carried on by the Pennsylvania Fair Rate Association should continue, even though City Council, with or without the co-operation of other municipalities, should take legal action to test the reasonableness of the rates.

He Has Served Well

Senator Frank J. Harris, a Candidate for Another Term, Has a Fine Record of Loyalty to the People.

Senator Frank J. Harris, who announced today his candidacy for another term, ought to be re-elected; for it is doubtful if there is any other member of the Legislature with so fine a record of public service.

Think of this: During the last four sessions, covering a period of seven years, Frank Harris did not miss a single day in attendance, was in his seat in the Senate and voted for or against every bill when the roll was called.

Harris trusts the people. He was the only member of the Senate to announce publicly in favor of the proposed referendum under which the people of Pittsburgh were to indicate whether or not they desired the city manager plan.

He is fearless and independent, a staunch champion of clean elections and good government, and a big-hearted man to whom the charitable and welfare organizations and the recipients of their bounty owe a great deal.

The Commonwealth will benefit more than Harris through his continuing to sit in the Senate.

Dubious Procedure

County Commissioner Mansfield's Determination to Stay In the Senate Will Cause Misgivings.

County Commissioner W. D. Mansfield's announcement that he will retain his seat in the State Senate, in which he has three more years to serve, will not be received with unalloyed satisfaction.

He hastens to explain that he is not greedy for the Senate salary, and after deducting his expenses, will donate to some charitable agency the $3,000 remuneration he will receive for the 1933 session.

But that is not all that is involved in the matter. The public is under the impression that the job of County Commissioner is a full-time job, for it pays a full-time salary; and there will be misgivings over the possibility of Commissioner Mansfield's doing his county work justice while spending several months at Harrisburg on the State's business.

Mansfield hints that there is important work to be done at Harrisburg which none but he can do. Perhaps that is so, but many of the citizens will doubt the propriety of his holding the two positions at the same time.

Lent

The Next Few Weeks Are an Exceptionally Good Time To Think of the More Worth While Things.

Noon services in some of the downtown churches yesterday called attention to the beginning of Lent. Trinity Cathedral will have noon services daily for the benefit of busy people, and every Christian church in the city will have special services between now and Easter Sunday, March 27, in observance of the period of penitence.

This is an exceptionally good time for all to think of the more worth while things. Atheists as well as religious persons can profit by practicing the self-denial that Lent suggests. There probably was never a period when an unselfish spirit was more to be desired than now.

Attend some of the Lenten services whether you are a believer or not. It will do you good to hear the hymns and the sermon and to see the reverence of the congregation.

A Black Record

The Bureau of Motor Vehicles issued yesterday a report of motor vehicle accidents for 1931.

Allegheny County makes a terrible showing. Three hundred and seventy-nine persons were killed and 6,151 injured in automobile crashes in the county last year.

Even Philadelphia, with nearly 600,000 greater population than Allegheny County, trails, with 210 fatalities and 5,697 injured.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Love—And Let Love

A "Great Lover," in these days, is one who can do his courting between wisecracks, kiss between the puffs of a cigaret, whisper sweet nothings to the wail of a saxophone—and still make it thrilling.

* * *

The bee is not really busy, says a scientist. Perhaps he's just impersonating a man, who suspects that his wife is planning to ask him to hang the new curtains.

A wife is, nine times out of 10, just the woman into whom a man happened to run, when he was trying to escape from another woman.

* * *

The more a man gets of anything in this life, the more he wants—unless it happens to be hard work, children or the same woman's kisses.

* * *

The highest mark of esteem that a man can give a woman is to offer to be her friend—and it is also the most withering insult.

* * *

No matter how much good advice the psychologists may dish out about the proper age at which to marry, girls will go right on marrying when they get the chance—and men, when they can't escape it.

The woman who marries a gigolo will have plenty to worry about; but that kind of woman probably has nothing to worry WITH.

* * *

Nothing is so maddening to a man as a woman who insists on "forgiving" him, when he doesn't WANT to be forgiven—but just forgotten!

* * *

* * *

There's no use going on fighting for a lost cause—or for a man's love, once it has begun to cool to sag or to waver.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—If I were to name the most versatile of the amazing personalities in the metropolis the choice would be Fulton Oursler. Yet, save in a literary circle, he is least known of the geniuses. Now 38, his accomplishments have taken place in the past nine years.

His beginning was as an obscure reporter on a Baltimore newspaper. To date he has written under five pseudonyms and authored the Anthony Abbott detective stories, the last of which was "About the Murder of the Night Club Lady." He visited a night club but once.

During the year he translated from the German—a $5 wonder book of magic. He is a member of the American Society of Magicians and Society of Psychic Research and one of the five Americans who can perform India's disappearing rope trick. He aided Houdini in exposing fake mediums.

He wrote "Sandalwood," for Pauline Lord; "The Spider," for John Halliday; "Behold This Dreamer," for Glen Hunter, and "All the King's Men," for Grant Mitchell. At the moment he has a play under rehearsal under a nom de plume and the exciting screen version of his "The Spider" for Edmund Lowe is from his pen.

Last fall he was working on three plays, one with John Erskine, at the same time and along with other duties exercised editorial supervision over a chain of cheaper magazines. He is slated for the presidency of the Author's Club, founded by Mark Twain.

* * *

Oursler has a push button brain which switches with wild enthusiasm from one thing to another without losing the art of concentration. Quick, fluent and moody, when he grows fatigued he pulls from a shelf a sailor-clad ventriloquist dummy. He is a master ventriloquist.

* * *

He lives in a drab, mysterious four-storied house in West Seventieth street and is one of the most difficult men, outside of J. P. Morgan, in the city to reach by telephone. He rarely visits an office but labors in a large, library-like room on the third floor. The remainder of the house is cluttered with shadowy museum pieces.

* * *

It would seem Oursler contributes enough talent for one family, but he's only half of a talented duo. His wife is Grace Perkins who played two years with Frank Bacon in "Lightnin'" and wrote such best sellers as "Angel Child," "Ex-Mistress," "Night Nurse," "Personal Maid" and "Boy Crazy."

* * *

Oursler, during the fantasia of his astounding career, once edited a musical journal and sponsored several text books for musical colleges. His interests in science and mythology are so keen he can discuss anything from Greek myths to the pathological and psychological motivation behind the present nudist craze.

* * *

Nearly 6 feet, dark, medium build, and weighing 165 pounds; he has coal black hair, snapping black eyes and a remotely bright smile. Visitors may find him brooding before an open fire-place, like a dark cloud of wisdom, halting now and then to dictate swift memoranda to an ever-hovering secretary. Despite enchantment for the theater and literature, he is never at opening nights or literary roundups. On occasions he slips away to prowl around magic shops. There is about him in repose an aura of gentle bleakness—a scrupulous neurosis—relieved at intervals by brightly colored acts of grace.

* * *

At the Lambs they were discussing a New York bank postponing for one month payment of a huge Cuban government debt. "Then what?" asked Hal Skelly. Cracked Harry Silvey: "They'll probably send a couple of rhumba dancers instead."

* * *

An imported wrestler offered New York its stiffest pompadour when he took a bow from the ringside the other night. "He looks like a prophylactic tooth brush suddenly scared by Harold Ross," Ring Lardner observed.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Here's a grand letter!

This letter should be laid before every rich man in America, before every politician, before every state or federal official, and a few sermons on it might not come amiss. Listen!

Dear Miss Robinson:

Every time I take up a paper, nowadays, I read criticisms of working people. Some complain because workers are overpaid; because they are trying to hang on to the established "living wage" they had before the depression. Others complain because there are two wage earners in one family, and they would have the wife put out of her job.

They all analyze the worker's budget—roast him if he does not manage wisely; if he aspires to "more than his due." And the man who gets $15 per week above his actual necessities, or who dares to spend that much on amusement and luxuries, is considered a criminal.

BUT HOW ABOUT THE MAN WHO GETS $15,000,000 MORE THAN HE ACTUALLY NEEDS?

No one criticizes him or assumes the right to judge his expenditures. No one considers him a criminal because he has aspired to "more than is his due" or feels that his surplus should be shared with the unemployed and starving.

A million dollars is more than just "a living wage." It is power—great power over the lives of others. But the man who has that much can use it as he likes, without criticism. IT'S THE LITTLE FELLOW WITH HIS $15 SURPLUS WHO IS CRITICIZED AND ANALYZED AND HELD RESPONSIBLE.

N. H. SOUBS.
Royal Oak, Mich.

And perhaps you'll say: "I'll bet he's a Socialist or a red. He wants to divide the wealth—"

You're wrong. Those remarks are not socialistic or communistic. They are the plainest common sense.

Why should the man who MAKES the money be treated as a beggar, and the man who TAKES the money be treated as a conqueror?

If any man is to be held responsible for the way in which he spends his money, then ALL men are to be held responsible!

If it's a sin for the Little Fellow to squander $5 on a poker game, then how about the Big Fellow who squanders $50,000 on his daughter's coming out party?

If it's wrong for Jim Mahoney's wife to keep her $20-a-week job, while Jim brings in his $25, THEN WHY ISN'T IT WRONG FOR PRACTICALLY ALL PUBLIC OFFICIALS TO PUT THEIR WIVES AND OTHER RELATIONS ON THE PUBLIC PAYROLLS?

And if it's fair to pry into the Murphy cupboard and publish to the world the exact amount of starch and sugar and meat which the Murphys consume per week—WHY ISN'T IT FAIR TO BUST INTO MR. MILLIONAIRE'S BUFFET AND SEE WHAT GROCERIES HE HAS ON HAND?

I have been poor. I know a poor man's pride. And personally I think that these intrusions upon and analyses of the poor are an outrage.

We will never save America by cutting a weekly nickle off the Murphy budget—yet most of our efforts are directed toward that end. We will never inspire men to be loyal to America, to work for America, by tactics like that!

Text For Today

Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness. —Isaiah, Lv:2.

League of Nations Toy of Professional Diplomats

By H. L. MENCKEN

(Copyright, 1932, The American Mercury, Inc.)

Reprinted by permission of the editor from the article, "What Is Going On in the World," in the February issue of the American Mercury.

HIGH PRESSURE salesmanship is again concentrated upon the somewhat frayed and bewildered old gentleman, Uncle Sam, seeking to induce him to join the League of Nations.

The advocates of the League commonly represent it to be a sort of international parliament, aloof and superior, BUT IT IS REALLY NO MORE THAT THAN ITS CREATURE, THE WORLD COURT, IS A TRIBUNAL OF JUSTICE.

It is simply a congress of ambassadors. During the first years it was perfumed by visionaries who honestly believed in its professed purposes, but of late it has been controlled absolutely by professional diplomats, and they carry on its proceedings according to the immemorial patterns of their order.

What interests them is by no means the common welfare of the human race; what interests them is simply the knavish, witless business of their trade—juggling laboriously for advantage (mainly petty), forestalling and hornswoggling the other fellow, and setting up and knocking down balances of power.

In all creation there are no stupider men than diplomats, nor any more anti-social, nor any less honest. Their dishonesty, indeed, is so deep seated that most of them are quite unconscious of it, as a Georgia cracker is unconscious of his hookworms and his fleas.

THE history of the League is a history of PUERILE BLUFFS and SHAMELESS EVASIONS. Its so-called triumphs have all been in the field of police court law. It made a great clatter about settling the dispute between Finland and Sweden over the Aland Islands, but any village Dogberry might have done as well, for both parties were too weak to fight, and the stakes were so small as to be almost worthless. It was precisely like settling a dispute between Louisiana and Mississippi over a string of malarious sand bars along the Gulf coast.

The League was also successful in stopping a trivial border clash between Greece and Bulgaria in 1925, and in shutting off some obscure frontier disputes between Hungary and Czechoslovakia, and Czechslovakia and Poland. But when it tackled the Silesian question it FAILED MISERABLY, for the French were parties to the dispute, and when it tried to prevent the rape of Lithuania by Poland it FAILED again, and for the same reason.

Similarly, it FAILED when it undertook to halt the alienation of Turkish territory to the comic opera state of Iraq, for Iraq was no more than a false face for England, and England, at that time, was strong enough to get whatever she wanted.

And it FAILED again when the Japanese invaded Manchuria.

THE World Court is quite as bad. In theory it is made up of impartial judges, but in actuality it consists of lawyers for the various more important litigants. They decide cases, not on the merits therof, BUT ON STRICTLY POLITICAL LINES. This was proved brilliantly at the time of the late combat between Germany and Austria on the one hand and France on the other over the projected German-Austrian customs union. The learned judges divided precisely as so many ambassadors might have divided. The seven whose countries favored the union decided solemnly that it was in strict accord with both Article 11 of the Treaty of Saint-Germain and the Geneva protocol. The other eight, whose countries were against it (either for private reasons or because France was prodding them), decided that it was illegal, immoral and against God. Thus it lost by one vote.

That vote represented the present preponderance of French influence in the League of Nations. No wonder the English grow uneasy!

As a matter of fact, two-thirds of the judges are simply worn-out politicians, eager only to keep their gaudy but hollow jobs. In trivial cases they are as full of legal libidy as the League of Nations is, but when it comes to the big boys they know how to temper law with prudence.

That there are plenty of people, apparently intelligent, who believe in such mummery is surely a melancholy proof of the eternal folly of mankind. A really impartial Court, with adequate force behind it, might conceivably keep order in the world, but certainly the present Court HAS NEITHER THE POWER NOR THE DISPOSITION TO DO SO. It is simply an agency of diplomacy, which is to say, of the old game of dog eat dog.

After 10 years of it, the WORLD IS NEARER WAR THAN AT ANY TIME SINCE THE SPRING OF 1914.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

In your reading do you avoid the things that require some thought?

You read what entertains you regardless of its value intellectually.

Do you know any more facts than you have gained by experience?

It is easy to make the excuse that you must use your eyes or your brain all day and so you need a rest and something lighter in the evening.

What you mean is that your inclination to learn new words or new phrases is nil.

Too much trouble to list the words you come across and do not understand.

But it is not to be wondered at, since you do not study to find the words that seem to express what you have in your mind.

When you were in school you referred often to your dictionary.

You were obliged to do so to find the correct use of certain words.

So you say a great many things that are misunderstood and often react unpleasantly in your life because of your misuse of words. And your intentions are good, but the wrong words get you in trouble.
